DEMPSEY DECIDES TO FIGHT GIBBONS

TELEPHONE STRIKERS FINED

10 GIRLS IN COURT ENTER APPEAL

Ten striking telephone operators arrested on Milk street Thursday, were found guilty today of disturbing the peace and obstructing the sidewalk.

They were fined $10 each by Judge A. K. Cohen of Municipal Court. They appealed and were released on their own recognizance for appearance at the August sitting of Suffolk Superior Court.

Members of Local 1A, Miss Annie E. Molloy's organization, the Royal operators, expressed a willingness today to meet a committee of strikers, provided Miss Julia S. O'Conor, the strike leader, was not a member of the committee.

These girls, however, declared emphatically that they would not go back on strike and said that the only reason for a conference would be to help these striking girls get back their jobs."

HOTTEST NON-UNION HATS.

The strikers are feeling much encouraged today because of the fact that Samuel Gompers wired Miss O'Conor that he was sending aid.

The union taxi drivers, about 400 in all, took a strike vote today to decide whether they would quit in sympathy with the operators.

They protest being obliged to drive no-striking operators to and from union exchanges.

Another company, it became known today, was made because certain girls would not go to work.

Police Radio Call to Find Man Whose Brother Is Ill

The Boston police department will use the radio this evening in an attempt to notify George A. Lange of Jamaica Plain of the illness of his brother.

Lange left a few days ago on a wedding tour of New England with his bride in a car, license No. 267,300. His brother has been taken desperately ill, and relatives have appealed to the police. The police department will broadcast an appeal from WGI, the Amrad broadcasting station, that anyone may notify Lange.

CALL TROOPS AS TOWN IS BURNED

Fireworks Blast Wipes Out Heart of Hardwick, Vt.; Many Homeless

Hardwick, Vt., July 3.—Fire wiped out the heart of the business section of Hardwick today, destroying five business blocks and two tenement houses and driving ten families from their homes. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

The fire is believed to have started from an explosion of fireworks in a store directly underneath the barber shop of A. J. Roy.

The flames when discovered, shortly before midnight, were beyond control, and were soon sweeping through the business blocks, all but one of which were of wooden construction.

Calls for help were sent out and firemen from Barre, Montpelier and Morrisville responded. Later, Company D, 172d Infantry, was rushed by special train from St. Johnsbury.

The greater part of the business section had been razed before the fire was brought under control, shortly after 3 o'clock. The families forced to flee from their homes in

CHAMP IS SURE OF $210,000

Will Collect What He Can on Balance of $100,000 Demanded

Great Falls, Mont., July 2.—By International News Service—Jack Dempsey and Tom Gibbons will fight at Shelby tomorrow for the World's heavyweight championship, under an agreement reached today.

Jack Kearns, manager of the champion, agreed to accept $210,000 already paid him and to take a chance of collecting $100,000 of the first gate receipts.

Great Falls, Mont., July 3 (A.P.)—The world's heavyweight championship battle between Jack Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons, which has been off and on for the past several hours, was definitely restored and will be fought July 4 as originally scheduled, according to an announcement at 2:45 o'clock this morning by Major J. E. Lane, one of the promot-

FRENCH SEIZE BANK AND GERMAN TOWN

Dusseldorf, July 3 (AP)—French troops occupied the town of Westhoven, northeast of Hagen, according to German sources, arresting its burgomaster, station-master, postmasters and other city officials.

Berlin, July 3—French troops occupied the Wiesbaden branch of the Reichsbank and confiscated considerable cash, says the Vossische Zeitung.

DOCKMEN'S STRIKE SPREADS TO LONDON WATERFRONT

London, July 3 (AP).—The dockers' strike which began in Hull yesterday and extended to Bristol and Cardiff now is affecting the London docks.

The strike, which has not been authorized by the trade union leaders, was started in Hull as a protest against the reduction of one shilling per day in the wages of the operatives to a national agreement.

At Hull 7,000 men are out and work in the port is completely tied up. Perishable cargoes are spoiling in many vessels.

SURPLUS WON'T CUT TAXES DECLARE CONGRESSMEN

Washington, July 3. (I.N.S.)—Irreconcilable conflict among Republican party leaders over the policy to be pursued in advance of the 1924 election will defeat any moves in the sixty-eighth Congress for the downward revision of taxes, despite the $200,000,000 surplus accumulated by the Treasury, according to opinions expressed in Congressional circles today.

WILL HAVE OUTINGS AT BEACH

American's Excursions for Mothers and Children to Begin July 10

The American resumes its annual "Mothers" and Childrens' Day Outings" for Boston American readers in Nantasket Beach.

Many who read this will remember the big event last year, and back before the Great War. Older children will recollect the annual salt-water joy ride that Boston children enjoyed for years back. The first outing will be held Tuesday, July 10.

Others will be held every Tuesday in July thereafter. The program will include:

1.—Passage by Nantasket Steamboat Co., Boat to Nantasket.

tain of the chauffeurs have to buy non-union cars at $2.50 each.

The situation today was virtually the same as yesterday, although the company claimed gains in most every locality except Lawrence, Framingham, Natick and Marlboro.

Company heads are highly pleased with the progress made in the training of recruits and, in the official report today, commented on the excellent results they are obtaining with these new girls.

Fifty-five new operators were put at work today in the Springfield and Worcester exchanges. According to the company there were no serious defections anywhere.

When the striking operators were called before the judge's bench today in the second session of Municipal Court there was a great stir among the spectators. Court attendants brought two benches and they were all seated just before the prisoners' dock.

Captain Parley Stillings of City all Avenue station, Sergeant Archie Campbell and Patrolmen Richard and Lombard testified at length. They told how the girls had blocked the walks by walking two and three abreast, how pedestrians had been forced to the gutter, how they had shouted abusive language at loyal operators and how they had caused a general disturbance.

The girls were without counsel. They were represented by Miss Rose Sullivan one of the officers of their union who acted as their spokesman when they appealed.

GIRLS WHO WERE FINED.

The girls who were fined are:

Mary M. Dwyer, twenty-five years old, No. 553 Sixth street, South Boston. Main exchange.

Marion Murray, twenty-two years old, No. 100 L street, South Boston Beach exchange.

Ruth Clancy, twenty-two years old, No. 8 Tremont street, Dedham. Main exchange.

Hilma Nelson, nineteen years old, No. 38 Carroll street, West Roxbury. Beach exchange.

Elizabeth Hoar, nineteen years old, No. 113 Hamden street, Roxbury. Main exchange.

Alice Powell, twenty years old, No. 103 Congress avenue, Chelsea.

Alice Downey, twenty-two years old, No. 37 Lawn street, Roxbury. Main exchange.

Marion Preamer, twenty-one years old, No. 34 Baxter street, Quincy. Main exchange.

Elizabeth Fitzgibbons, twenty-one years old, No. 3345 Dorchester avenue, Dorchester. Main exchange.

Mattie McHugh, twenty-four years old, No. 134 Minot street, Dorchester. Main exchange.

Court officers escorted them to the corridor until after the hearing. All then marched to Tremont Temple, where the strikers were holding a mass meeting.

POLICE QUOTE STRIKER.

The spectators were given a laugh when Officer Lombard told how one of the girls had advised her colleagues, "Do not mind, he's only a scab himself."

Later Judge Cohen remarked: "There is no evidence that any of these girls calling anyone a scab except this officer and that has no bearing on this case."

Miss O'Connor made the charge today that all the Bell companies in the country were contributing to one of the largest "slush funds" ever collected to fight the strike here.

She made this charge before the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers after 100 or so members of the rival union, the International Brotherhood of Telephone Workers, had deserted their organization to join the strike.

SEES DETECTIVE MENACE.

"Every available private detective in Chicago and New York is being hired and brought to Boston by the telephone company," Miss O'Connor said, "to menace the strike and to make things uncomfortable for the strikers.

"The strikers must endure private detectivism and thuggism, combined with the greatest slush fund ever gotten together to break a union.

"Despite all this, we will lick the telephone company, and we will lick the company badly."

Miss O'Connor received a telegram from Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in which Mr. Gompers said:

"I am getting in telegraphic communication with Organizer McGrenera and am assigning him to help the movement of the telephone operators for better conditions of life and work. I wish you every success."

DESERT OWN UNION.

During the Electrical Workers' meeting in Tremont Temple, 350 members of the United Brotherhood of Telephone Workers, including 160 members of Boston Local 25, Cable Splicers, deserted their organization and affiliated themselves with the Electrical Workers and the American Federation of Labor.

Fifty telephone company employes not affiliated with either organization also joined the Electrical Workers.

The cable splicers promised the 175 remaining members of their local would affiliate with the Electrical Workers by Friday of this week.

This action, according to David Mogerand, president of the Boston Local of the Electrical Workers, will give the Electrical Workers numerical superiority over the Telephone Workers, and will assure success in the event of a strike.

LAWRENCE MAYOR ACTS.

Representatives of the striking operators in Lawrence called upon Mayor Daniel W. Mahoney and requested that, in view of the crippled business conditions in that city, a meeting of business men be called at which the strikers would be given an opportunity to explain their side of the controversy.

Mayor Mahoney called the meeting for today. Markets and business houses in general in Lawrence report unsatisfactory trade conditions as a result of the telephone operators' strike.

Edward K. Hall of New York, vice-president of the American Bell Telephone Company, is now in Lawrence studying the situation. He declared the telephone company is maintaining the best service it can, "and will continue to maintain the best possible service 100 years from now."

Company officials in Providence claim 70 per cent of the full quota of operators will be on duty in that city by tomorrow night, and that service in that city is slowly but surely improving.

2,000 AT MEETING.

The Tremont Temple meeting was under the auspices of Local 142, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and was attended by more than 2,000 persons.

William Walsh, president of the state branch, A. F. of L., in his address said: "This strike is not merely of interest to Boston and New England. Every labor organization in the United States is avidly waiting for news of this strike. It is a strike of almost unprecedented importance to the entire United States.

SAVING WAGE QUESTION.

"It is not a question of a living wage that is being fought in New England by the telephone operators. It is the question of a saving wage," he shouted.

Rudolph Miller, vice-president of the Central Labor Union of Springfield, declared union labor in Springfield offers "not hundreds, but thousands of dollars," in support of the strikers, and hinted at sympathetic strikes in many varieties of labor organizations.

In Western Massachusetts, he said, "some business men are sending girls from their offices to act as strikebreakers. The Central Labor Union is not blind to this. If this is not stopped we will go into some of these and plants with our organization."

PREFERENCE TO RULE

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company in Providence and Newport issued a bulletin telling strikers they will not be taken back in a body, but in numbers only sufficient to fill vacancies existing when the strike is ended. Strikebreakers and those few regular operators who remain at the works will be given preference over employes now on strike, the statement read.

Large numbers of girls have been "loaned" by Providence and Newport business houses to operate for the telephone company. Many operators from Massachusetts and New York have been imported.

Gains Are Claimed By Telephone Co.

Gains in various sections were reported and announcement that 300 girls now on vacation in the Boston Division would return to their posts the first of the week was made by the telephone company. The report follows:

This morning's report from the central district showed ninety-eight more new operators on duty than were on hand when Saturday's report was received.

NORMAL QUOTA.

Back Bay now has a full normal quota. Beach, three-fourths of its normal quota. Main, nine-tenths of its normal quota. Richmond, 55 per cent of its normal quota. Congress, Haymarket, Boston, Tandem and Boston Toll are practically at 100 per cent force rating.

As stated in previous bulletins the forces at Beach, Main and Richmond consist principally of new operators, so that service is not up to standard in these places.

In the Boston Division about 300 girls are on vacation. They are due to return the end of this week, and it is expected that practically all of them will return to their switchboard positions.

PLACES FILLED.

In the Suburban District conditions are practically normal except in two or three places.

Malden has 87 per cent of a full force on duty, and Revere about the same percentage. In both these offices 80 per cent, or more of the old force is on duty, and their places have been readily filled.

The situation in Lawrence was practically unchanged.

At Andover thirteen of the force failed to report on Saturday. Consequently only six operators were on duty at 9 o'clock this morning.

Here, as at other points, recruiting is steadily going on, so that it will be a matter of only a few days before the vacant places are filled.

Company Reports Many New Recruits

The telephone company claimed gains today. The official report of conditions:

The report issued by the telephone company this morning with respect to force conditions at 9 o'clock indicated that it was having continued success in recruiting its forces at such places as needed additional forces. It was stated that a larger number of new operators could be added daily if it had been possible to organize the instructors force necessary to intensively train the candidates.

These new recruits have been sent to the switchboards with but one day's intensive training. Naturally they are slow at first, but they are making satisfactory progress.

AIDED BY PUBLIC.

The success of these new operators in taking hold so rapidly is due, in large degree, to the good will of the public. At the affected places the public has very generally retrained from making calls except such as were really important.

Less than the normal volume of business has flowed through some of the switchboards at central offices, such as Main, Beach and Richmond; consequently, the operators on duty have in this way been helped to handle such calls as did come.

The 9 o'clock report of force conditions showed material additions when compared with the report presented yesterday at the same hour.

At Springfield 33 new operators were added and only 65 places to be filled.

At Worcester 32 new operators were added, leaving only 98 places to be filled.

Andover had a full quota on duty at 9 o'clock this morning, largely new operators.

UNCHANGED AT LAWRENCE.

Lawrence was in about the same situation as it was yesterday morning, at 9 o'clock, a small force being on hand to give emergency services.

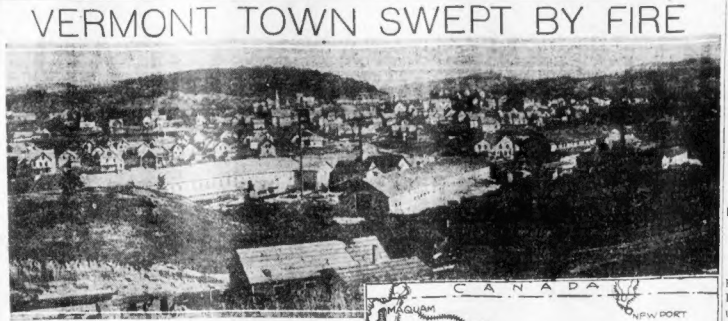
Natick had practically a full force. But Framingham, Marlboro and Milford had about half a force of mostly new operators.

Brockton had recruited about two-thirds the normal force on duty.

Less than about one-third the normal quota on duty and Salem about one-half.

Waltham and the three New Boston exchanges, Mystic, Revere and Hull, had recruited practically their full normal quotas.

VERMONT TOWN SWEPT BY FIRE



DISASTER CAUSED BY FIREWORKS

At top, panoramic view of Hardwick, Vt., a town of granite quarries and cutters with a population of nearly 3,000 where complete destruction was threatened by fire that started from fireworks exploding in a store. Map shows location of the town on Lake Champlain and St. Johnsbury Railroad, about twenty miles from St. Johnsbury and an equal distance from Montpelier. Help from those cities and from other places was rushed to the scene of the conflagration. Troops were also rushed from St. Johnsbury.

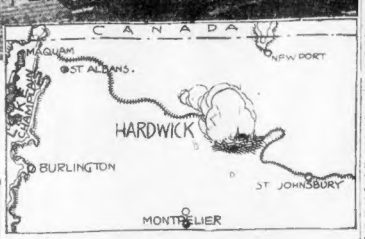
their night clothing lost all of their household property.

Telephone communication with outside points was cut off by the burning out of the central exchange.

The town has a population of almost 3,000 and the cutting and quarrying of granite is the chief industry. It is on the St. Johnsbury and Lake Champlain Railroad.



HARDING JOINS OREGON TRAIL CELEBRATION

On Board President Harding's Special Train July 3 (A.P.)—President Harding theed today the most strenuous day's program of his Western trip in the smallest town he has yet visited.

The program had to do with the Oregon trail celebration and the town of Meacham, Ore., ten miles from a railroad and with a population of fifty-one persons.

The population of the little town, however, was augmented greatly by visitors from all parts of the State and adjoining States, who joined in celebration of the eighteenth anniversary of the arrival of the first wagon train in the Willamette Valley.

The day's program included:

Pioneer pageant depicting the coming of the white man to Oregon; pioneer dance in monster dance pavilion, grand march to be led by President and Mrs. Harding; horse shoe pitching tournament for championship of the world, winner to pitch game with President for championship belt.

JAPAN MOVES TO ENFORCE WASHINGTON NAVAL PACT

Tokio, July 3 (A.P.)—Japan has decided to approach America and Great Britain with a view of reaching a tripparty agreement to enforce the provisions of the Washington naval treaty, without awaiting ratification by France, it was asserted confidently today in Japanese newspapers, which print statements believed to be reliable.

Paris, July 3.—To make certain the Washington naval treaties will be ratified by the Chamber of Deputies before the close of the present session, Premier Poincare has decided to keep Parliament sitting until July 13, according to Echo de Paris.

2 SHIPS SINK IN CRASH CREWS RESCUED OFF N. F.

St. Mary's Bay, N. F., July 3 (A. N. S.)—Rescued crews of the Norwegian steamer O. A. Knudsen and the French ship Banba, were landed here today telling a story of a collision between the two coal freighters off Newfoundland.

The crash occurred in a heavy fog late yesterday. Both ships sank. The crews of both ships manned life boats and were picked up by other ships in the vicinity.

The Norwegian ship displaced 2,500 tons while the Banba was a 500-ton boat.

ALIENS CLOG ELLIS ISLAND; 4,000 MORE ARE DUE TODAY

New York, July 3.—With the immigration quotas of seven nations filled, and 4,000 additional aliens expected to arrive on liners today, the Ellis Island immigration station is clogged as never before in its history. Four thousand more Europeans came yesterday on twelve liners. Only 2,268 immigrants who had previously arrived were examined and of this number only 1,500 were permitted to land. The inability of R. C. White, Assistant Secretary of Labor, who is ill, to act on appeals, is holding up many cases.

GLOUCESTER MAN IN DORY SIX DAYS WITHOUT FOOD

Halifax, N. S., July 3.—After being adrift without food or water in an open dory for six days and nights, rowing and sailing about 160 miles, John Oliver, a Portuguese, of the Gloucester fishing vessel Edith C. Rose, was picked up Sunday off Ter Bay, Guysboro County, by the coastal steamer Cheshasco, and landed here. His home is in Gloucester.

When rescued, Olive was almost exhausted. The first thing he asked for was a cigarette.

NORTH CAROLINA ABOLISHES LASH

Raleigh, N. C., July 3.—An executive order by Governor Morrison has placed 1,165 prisoners at State camps under indeterminate sentence and prison directors have abolished the lash.

Assistant Prison Superintendent Hugh Love said the system is working well and the indeterminate sentence has greatly simplified prison regimen.

IRENE SCOUTS STORY SHE SEEKS DIVORCE

Paris, July 3.—"The rumor's unfounded. We're happy as larks," Irene Castle said as she sat at dinner with her husband, Robert Treman, and denied rumors they were about to separate. There had been some gossip that the dancer had come here to establish a residence and seek a divorce. Treman arrived recently from Ithaca, N. Y.

Goes Into Business

MARGARET WOODROW WILSON

New York, July 3.—Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson, daughter of the former President, has decided to become a business woman. She has become associated with The Blow Company, Inc., a national advertising agency. Miss Wilson will devote the major part of her time to selling the services of the Blow Company merchandising and advertising, acting as well as a member of its consulting board.

MURDERER'S FATE IS IN BALANCE

Doomed to Die in Week of July 12, Governor's Council Will Not Meet Until July 11

The sword of Damocles will hang over the head of Paul Peppas, convicted murderer, until the eleventh hour.

Whether it will fall, to snuff out his life in expiation of his crime, or whether it will be stayed by the hand of Governor Cox, generously doling executive clemency, will not be known to Peppas until twelve hours before he is scheduled to die.

Peppas is sentenced to meet death in the electric chair during the week which begins on July 12. The grim executioner habitually collects his human toll a moment after the neighboring church clocks have tolled the hour of midnight and the entrance of the new day.

Only Governor Cox and the Governor's Council stand between him and his death. Peppas has formally written to the Governor for mercy.

The Governor and the Council can decide to commute his sentence from death to life imprisonment.

Tomorrow is a holiday and the Governor and Council will not hold their regular weekly meeting. They have decided to convene again a week from tomorrow—July 11. The day before Peppas is condemned to pay the penalty.

It will be on that afternoon when Peppas will finally learn whether he is to walk out of the death cell the following morning to the death chair or to such liberty as may be gained by life imprisonment.

Since Peppas was convicted of slaying Alice Avenarius, he has been in and out of the death house five times. The official executioner seems to have loyed with him like a cat with a rat, always ready to strike but not quite dealing the fatal blow.

The intention of a holiday tomorrow is the latest contrivance of fate to add another week of suspense and uncertainty to the life of the slayer.

BELGIANS WARN OF ACTIVE WAR BY GERMANS

Brussels, July 3 (By A. P.).—The Belgian answer to the British questionnaire on the Franco-Belgian reparation policy has been sent to the Belgian Ambassador in London, who is expected to deliver it to Lord Curzon, the British Foreign Secretary, this afternoon.

Brussels, July 3.—In Belgian military circles the bombing of the Belgian troop train at Duisburg last Saturday is regarded as an extremely grave symptom of conditions in the Ruhr.

General Jacques and other commanders express the opinion that Germany is seeking to provoke serious incidents which the German Nationalists would make the pretext for inaugurating military action, preparations for which, the Belgian military men assert, have long been completed.

The Berlin government, they suggest would avoid assuming responsibility but would count upon British passivity to allow guerilla warfare to begin against allied troops. Opinion in political quarters and in the press is rapidly crystallizing in favor of a more vigorous attitude toward Germany.

2 TOURING BOYS SENT HOME

The plans of Henry Niles, ten years old, and William Haskell, eleven years old, two Malden lads, to "see America first" by means of a hiking trip through New England to the Maine woods, were nipped in the bud, A policeman found them at the train sheds in East Boston and today had them sent back to their homes.

The boys left Malden Sunday afternoon. The first leg of their journey carried them as far as Sullivan square, where they camped for the night. They resumed their hiking journey to Maine Monday by way of the East Boston ferry and the Narrow Gauge Railroad.

Having no money to pay fares on the train, Niles dodged the conductor and Haskell jumped off the car when he was unable to escape the ticket puncher's eye. They were reunited at the train sheds and then Joint Lay hops in sight and ended their adventures.

Phone Booth Users Get Money Back and Some More

Some people don't care how long the telephone strike lasts. A man in Dorchester dropped five nickels in the slot before the operator answered. When he voiced his feelings in no uncertain terms, nine "jits" dropped in the bottom of the box.

In a Tremont street drug store a man dropped the customary coin and was rewarded by getting his number right off the bat—and a quarter and a nickel hopped back at him.

"Keep it up," was his rejoinder as he walked out of the booth.

Gains Are Claimed By Telephone Co.

Gains in various sections were reported and announcement that 300 girls now on vacation in the Boston Division would return to their posts the first of the week was made by the telephone company. The report follows:

This morning's report from the central district showed ninety-eight more new operators on duty than were on hand when Saturday's report was received.

PLACES FILLED.

In the Suburban District conditions are practically normal except in two or three places.

Malden has 87 per cent of a full force on duty, and Revere about the same percentage. In both these offices 80 per cent, or more of the old force is on duty, and their places have been readily filled.

The situation in Lawrence was practically unchanged.

At Andover thirteen of the force failed to report on Saturday. Consequently only six operators were on duty at 9 o'clock this morning.

Here, as at other points, recruiting is steadily going on, so that it will be a matter of only a few days before the vacant places are filled.

Company Reports Many New Recruits

The telephone company claimed gains today. The official report of conditions:

The report issued by the telephone company this morning with respect to force conditions at 9 o'clock indicated that it was having continued success in recruiting its forces at such places as needed additional forces. It was stated that a larger number of new operators could be added daily if it had been possible to organize the instructors force necessary to intensively train the candidates.

These new recruits have been sent to the switchboards with but one day's intensive training. Naturally they are slow at first, but they are making satisfactory progress.

AIDED BY PUBLIC.

The success of these new operators in taking hold so rapidly is due, in large degree, to the good will of the public. At the affected places the public has very generally retrained from making calls except such as were really important.

Less than the normal volume of business has flowed through some of the switchboards at central offices, such as Main, Beach and Richmond; consequently, the operators on duty have in this way been helped to handle such calls as did come.

The 9 o'clock report of force conditions showed material additions when compared with the report presented yesterday at the same hour.

At Springfield 33 new operators were added and only 65 places to be filled.

At Worcester 32 new operators were added, leaving only 98 places to be filled.

Andover had a full quota on duty at 9 o'clock this morning, largely new operators.

UNCHANGED AT LAWRENCE.

Lawrence was in about the same situation as it was yesterday morning, at 9 o'clock, a small force being on hand to give emergency services.

Natick had practically a full force. But Framingham, Marlboro and Milford had about half a force of mostly new operators.

Brockton had recruited about two-thirds the normal force on duty.

Less than about one-third the normal quota on duty and Salem about one-half.

Waltham and the three New Boston exchanges, Mystic, Revere and Hull, had recruited practically their full normal quotas.

LYNN PARADERS TO DEFY ORDER OF POLICE

Thousands of shoe workers, including 3500 women members of the Stitchers' local of the Amalgamated Shoe Workers of America, will defy Lynn's Chief of Police tonight and parade past the main telephone exchange as a protest against the company bringing strike-breakers into the city to take the places of striking operators.

A permit to parade was granted by Mayor McPhetres. Immediately telephone officials asked Chief of ofPice Burckles to restrain the parade from passing the telephone exchange in Oxford street. The chief acquiesced. Immediately the paraders said they would defy the chief and all his police force to prevent them.

Women officials of the Stitchers' Local branded the police order as ridiculous, in view of Mayor McPhetres, official head of the police department, having ranted a permit to parade through any of the downtown streets.

DENOUNCE POLICE "BLUFF."

"The whole moral effect of the parade would be lost if we let the police bluff us out of Oxford street," said an official of the Stitchers' Local. "We are parading mostly because we want to show these so-called 'loyal' operators how their work is regarded by union men.

The Stitchers Local is the largest organized body of women workers in the United States.

"Because telephone officials are now petting these so called 'loyal' operators,"said another, "they needn't think they are respected by organized labor. We have little use for the methods o ftelephone officials in finding these girls such delicacies as chicken and lobster to break up efforts of honest operators to get what is due them."

The Lynn Shoe Manufacturers' Association today sent out a circular letter to its members and business men asking support of the telephone company in the present crisis. A copy was seized and read to strikers at a meeting in Exchange Hall.

COMPANY ASKS AID.

"I want you girls to understand just how the business men of Lynn regard the service we have given them in the past," said Elizabeth Cleary, head of the strikers, before reading the letter. "I want you to know just how great an asset lasting is their friendship for us.

"We believe it your duty to give the telephone company all the support you can in the present labor difficulties," read the letter.

"The present strike in New England, if successful, would mean wage increases amounting to $10,000,000 yearly. This will be paid by the public with a new readjustment of telephone rates.

The demand of the operators would mean the beginning of a seven-hour day for all New England industry. It would add another load to that burden which industries of New England already carry.

The letter was signed by George C. Johnson, secretary of the association, of which Samuel L. Fisher is president.

DRIVES AUTO 1,131 MILES IN 24 HOURS

Edmonton, Alta., July 3.—Paul Welch today claimed a new record for a 24-hour automobile endurance run, having completed 1,131 9-10 miles on the Edmonton fair grounds track with but one stop for a tire change. The previous world's record was given as 842 miles.

France Is Fighting For Legion Ideals, Foch Cables

Indianapolis, July 3.—Marshal Foch, in an Independence Day cable message received at national headquarters of the American Legion here to, day, said:

"I am happy to repeat to the American Legion on the occasion of Independence Day my sentiments of sincere attachment.

"The legion has demonstrated that it remains faithful to the principles that governed its foundation. These principles are those for which France is fighting at this time.

"The legion has recognized this fact and our common action as in the days of the past for the defence of right in the world cannot fail to continue to work for the highest welfare of our two countries."

Today

Independence Day.
Europe's Troubles.
Dempsey's Beard.
Mr. Bok's $100,000.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1923, by Star Company)

TOMORROW will be the Fourth of July, "Independence Day," 147 years away from the first Independence Day. There never was a time when the United States needed genuine independence more—independence of Europe, its troubles, fights, jealousies, hatreds, robberies, falling money, World Court, and League of Nations.

THE POUND STERLING again dropped to its lowest price for the year. Francs fell below six cents apiece. You can buy German money for less than you could have it printed in the United States. Something is wrong over there and they know it. We also know it, and shall keep out.

THE FRENCH are thorough, once they start it. Some time ago they put Herr Krupp von Bohlen, husband of the lady that owns the great Krupp factory, in prison for a long term of years. Yesterday the French seized and occupied the entire Krupp plant. All work in it has ceased. This means many thousands of men out of work, and Germany takes another step on the road to ruin. What it will mean eventually for France, time will tell.

MR. BOK made the greatest possible mistake, retiring from active work, just when he learned his trade. He is doing all he can to be useful as a retired person, and offers $100,000 for "a practical plan that will enable the United States to co-operate in keeping world peace." He will pay $50,000 for the idea, and $50,000 more when the Senate, or the people, by their votes, indorse it.

THE SUGGESTION of this humble writer is: Mr. Bok, put your $100,000 in five good flying machines for the United States service, to carry mail in peace and bombs in war. The best "practicable plan" to preserve peace, as far as we are concerned, is to make it dangerous for anybody to attack us.

THE ODDS are five to one on Dempsey for the big fight that may or may not be held tomorrow. That interests millions not interested at all in what happens in Europe or in the distant nebulae.

Also, the rules may compel Mr. Dempsey to shave before the fight begins. It is his custom to go into the ring with a thick growth of black hair on his face.

—Kopp.

THAT BEARD will interest those to whom mere prize fighting means little. The races that rule the earth are bearded races, the Nordics being specialists in beard growing.

The beard kept them warm, frightened their smooth-faced enemies, and protected them from a cold. It acted as a shock-absorber when the enemy's club or teeth landed on the face or neck. Perhaps Dempsey likes to fight with face black and hairy for a double reason. His enemy's gloves slip off the hairy surface, and that savage surface disturbs the enemy's nerves.

UPSETTING NATURE'S balance is dangerous. Russia realizes it. Her crops are promising, famine does not threaten as it did. But the great trouble is mice; they have multiplied in tens of millions and threaten the crops because nearly all the cats were cooked and eaten during the famine time.

A cat warranted to kill mice is worth sixty million rubles. Before the war that would have been $30,000,000. A big price for a cat. Sixty million rubles is a big price even now.

DURING THE WAR all the wild game was frightened or killed off in France. The French sportsmen seek, in Germany, deer, wild boars and other animals, in order, as the not very courteous letter puts it, "to have something to shoot at."

If the French sportsmen will wait a while it is likely they will have plenty of things to shoot at, many of them being German, and two-legged.

The present trend is all in the direction of another war and plenty of shooting.

RUMANIA AND POLAND, comparing notes, announce that their combined armies are big enough "to paralyze any move of aggression or annexation made by the neighbor to the east." They think they are big enough in a fighting way to hold off Russia. One or both will have a chance to prove it.

Awhile ago it was thought the League of Nations would prevent the start of another big fight. New France pays no attention to England. England is doubling her air forces to get ready for trouble. The outlook isn't pleasant.

RESCUED AS STEAMSHIP GOES DOWN

HELEN BAKER; MRS. L. B. SPARKS (INSET)

The steamship Advance, which ran ashore on Shut-In Island at the Eastern entrance to Halifax harbor during a fog, broke in two on the rocks and started to settle as tug boats took the last of the passengers and crew from the wrecked ship.

The Advance, of the Intercolonial Navigation Company, left Boston with a full passenger list last Saturday, bound for Canadian ports.

Mrs. Lillian B. Sparks, No. 31 Oakwells street, Lynn, and her two children, Lawrence and Ruth Eleanor were among the rescued passengers. They will continue their vacation trip aboard another ship.

Miss Helen M. Baker, No. 59 Tremont street, Charlestown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Baker, was another passenger.

Lawrence Sparks Ruth Sparks

Miss Baker is an instructor in the John Boyle O'Reilly school, Boston, and is prominent in the amateur theatricals of St. Mary's parish, Charlestown. She will continue her trip, and visit her sister in New Brunswick.

Passengers who sailed for Newfoundland are proceeding today aboard the Red Cross Liner Rosalind.

MELLON AND BALDWIN TO DISCUSS DRY LAW

London, July 3 (AP).—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, expects to meet Prime Minister Baldwin and other members of the Cabinet informally during the week and is likely to discuss the problems in which the two countries are especially interested, including the liquor question.

Secretary Mellon

So far Mr. Mellon has devoted most of his time to visiting old friends, motoring in the suburbs and making purchases in the London shops. With his daughter, Miss Ailsa Mellon, he attended a dance last evening given by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at Brook House, which she has taken for the season. This afternoon he was to attend the unveiling of the Page Memorial and tomorrow will take part in the Fourth of July ceremonies at the American Embassy.

Thursday afternoon the Secretary will talk over the teacups at No. 10 Downing street with the Prime Minister and Mrs. Baldwin. He will spend the latter part of the week auto-touring.

MISSING LYNN GIRL SOUGHT BY PARENTS

Miss Mary Montemurro, No. 50 Carnes street, Lynn, has been missing from her home since Friday noon, according to a report made to the police by her parents.

The latter say she left her home for work and has not been seen since.

WATCH FOR FIREWORKS 'RUNNERS'

Manhattan Guards Coast to Insure "Safe and Sane" Fourth

New York, July 3.—A cordon of fire wardens was thrown along the waterfront today with orders to arrest all persons caught "bootlegging" fireworks into Manhattan.

Other officers were detailed by Thomas J. Hayes, chief of the bureau of fire prevention, to guard railroad terminals and automobile highways. A city ordinance prohibits the sale of fireworks.

Fire Commissioner Drennan mobilized his staff in a rigid search for contraband fireworks. Sales of wholesalers authorized to ship explosives out of the state were particularly scrutinized.

Commissioner Drennan is confident that New York will have a "safe and sane" Fourth.

BEVERLY MAYOR WILL ASK FOR 'GRAFT' PROBE

Mayor G. Harold Whittemore of Beverly announced he has enough evidence to justify the arrest and conviction of five persons for conspiracy in openly charging "Lightning Jack" Hayes, the "shooting police chief," bought his job for $500 from the Mayor.

Criminal complaints, he said, will be his answer to the affidavits alleging graft, which have been filed with the district attorney. Reporters were imported by local political enemies, he told the Board of Aldermen, to help frame up the case against his administration.

Edward Thompson, a local trade union official and president of the aldermen, is leader of the political faction opposed to Mayor Whittemore. Thomas Yess and Nicholas Tanella swore to the affidavits in question.

At the aldermanic meeting Mayor Whittemore changed his passive course of action in the Hayes matter and demanded that the board investigate the police department.

"No public official was ever subjected to such bold, open persecution as myself," he said.

"We must wait for the court to say whether Chief Hayes was wrong, but right or wrong from now on things are going to be improved in the police department." The mayor referred to the shooting of a Lynn boy and girl by the chief.

DISCUSS RUM SHIP IN COMMONS

London, July 3 (AP).—The activities of the British steamship Strandhill, in the rum-running trade off the American coast, came up today for consideration in the House of Commons.

Questions whether the vessel had disposed of a cargo of spirits from the Clyde brought the declaration from Viscount Wolmer, parliamentary secretary to the Board of Trade, that the case was being investigated and that, if the British law had been violated, the Government would prosecute. He declined to give the names of the owners of the cargo, which he said were required for revenue purposes.

The Strandhill was formerly owned by the United States Shipping Board under the name of Cartona.

Everett Couple Elope

MR. AND MRS. P. J. LEARY.

Plans for an elaborate wedding in Everett in October were discontinued when parents of the young couple received a telegram telling them to "call off plans for the wedding. We have eloped."

Miss Rose Katherine Devine, 21 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Sheehan, No. 27 Appleton street, Everett, is the bride. Philip J. Leary, 30 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Leary, Heath street, Everett, is the bridegroom.

Several days ago the couple left Everett, ostensibly to spend the day at Nantasket Beach. A telegram received by the bride's parents that night told of a wedding in Boston.

PIAZZA CRASH INJURES 11 IN TENEMENT

Chicopee, July 3.—The authorities are investigating the collapse of the second floor piazza in a three-story dwelling, which resulted in injury to eleven persons, including five children. The structure collapsed under the weight of nine women and children, occupants of the tenement who had rushed out to watch a runaway steam roller.

The most seriously hurt was Caroline Toper, 6 years old, who suffered internal injuries and a possible fracture of the skull. The driver of the steam roller, Louis Laramay of Adenville, who had lost control of the machine as it gathered speed going down the hill, suffered a fractured skull. Both are at the Mercy Hospital, Springfield.

The others injured were: Mrs. Michael Jaworek, broken ankle, bruises; Miss Frances Matras, broken leg; Lena Jaworek, 11, cuts on shoulder and head; Stefania Cebula, 16, cuts and bruises; Nellie Cebula, 8, cuts on face and body; Polly Macialek, 18, abrasions of head and shoulder; Mrs. Francis Cebula, broken leg.

Breakfast in New York, Supper in San Francisco, Is Hope of Army Lieutenant

Mineola, N. Y., July 3 (I. N. S.).—Breakfast in New York at sunrise—supper in San Francisco before dark.

"I'll do it before Saturday," Lieut. Robert E. Maughan, army airman-predicted today. Lieut. Maughan had just completed the final test of Uncle Sam's fastest plane, the Curtis "V" 40 horse-power "streak of greased lightning," on which the army depends to establish a new world's record.

"Weather is the only element of chance I believe—the plane is ready and so am I," Lieut. Maughan explained.

If weather is perfect from coast to coast, Lieut. Maughan will make the jump at 4 o'clock tomorrow morning, and at 9 o'clock tomorrow night, he hopes to see the sun sink over the Golden Gate.

3 NATIONS INVOLVED IN LIQUOR TANGLE

Washington, July 3.—An international ship liquor triangle was placed before the American Government by the British Embassy. The British liner Tuscania, plying between New York and Italian ports, under the Italian law is required to carry wine for certain passengers. Under the American law, she cannot take the wine from New York. The possibility arises of a claim against the American Government backed by Great Britain.

Prettiest Feet Her Pride

AGNES VERNE

Chicago girl who is to be model at shoe show next week. She wears size 4B shoe.

Agnes Verne of Chicago, "the girl with the prettiest feet in the United States," is coming to Boston next week to wear the latest footwear fashions on the runway at the Fourth Annual National Shoe Style Show, which is to be held in Mechanics Building.

Miss Verne won her prettiest feet title when she was declared the winner of a contest conducted by the National Shoe Retailers' Association in Chicago last January. The contest was open to anyone in the United States. More than 200 young women competed for the honors which went to Miss Verne.

Two of the judges of the contest were Boston men, James H. Stone, president of the Shoe Retailer, and Arthur D. Anderson, editor of the Boot and Shoe Recorder. Both of these men have acted as judges in several foot contests throughout the country.

They declare that Miss Verne has the most perfect feet they have ever seen. She wears a size 4B shoe.

Plans for the style show are progressing splendidly, Chester L. Campbell, general manager, says. Indications are that the show will bring out the largest gathering of the shoe trade ever held in New England.

NO. END BOY INJURED BY WINTHROP AUTO

Eight-year-old Edward Rosa, of No. 27 Shoate street, North End, was struck by an automobile operated by [illegible] court street. He was removed to the Haymarket Relief Station suffering from severe cuts and bruises about the body. The automobile was operated by Louis Marden of No. 146 River road, Winthrop.

EAST BOSTON GIRL INJURED BY AUTO

Marie Kuz, eight years old, of No. 32 Porter street, East Boston, while playing under the Tremont street bridge was knocked down by the automobile of Carl H. Kohlus of No. 106 Minden street, Boston. He took her to the City Hospital. She suffered a broken collar bone.

ALCOHOL SENDS 64 INSANE

Year's Record at Danvers Asylum Shows 40 Old-Timers, 12 Moderates, 4 New Drinkers

Soaking Wets as well as Sahara Drys can read the annual report of the Danvers State Hospital, out today, and get a kick out of it.

Of the 64 patients admitted last year, sixty-four were suffering from insanity induced by alcoholism.

BUT—of the sixty-four cases, forty had marked alcoholic habits before prohibition.

AND—there were twelve others who had been "moderate drinkers" before Mr. Volstead put on the ban.

HOWEVER—there were four who had never tasted liquor and who, therefore, became insane from liquor imbibed since the imbibing of liquor has been outlawed by law.

There was not definite data affecting the eight other alcoholic cases.

WHERE THEY GOT T.

The new patients were asked where they got the liquor. These were some of the answers: "Any place"; Any barroom"; "They all sell it"; Drugstore"; "Made it"; "On the street"; "Neighbors"; "At home"; "At a christening."

Moonshine was responsible for the downfall of twenty-eight men and two women. Other brands: Jamaica ginger, 6; wine, 3; denatured alcohol, gin, patent medicine, "Jakey," hair tonic, essences and "a bluish liquid," one each. There were at least thirteen "undetermined" causes of alcoholic insanity.

1631 REGULARS.

There are 1,631 regular patients at Danvers. A total of 2,569 men and women were treated during the year. There were 248 deaths. About 285 patients were discharged, seventeen of them as "not insane."

Three committed suicide, one died by accidental asphyxiation and one by accidental scalding. "through the oversight of an attendant." The hospital authorities had the attendant in the last case arrested on the charge of criminal negligence.

HIGH SCHOOL MATES IN SECRET WEDDING

Haverhill, July 3.—A romance which had its inception at a Haverhill school baseball game two years ago resulted in the marriage on April 7 at Salem, N. H., of Cecil L. Jones, 19 years old, member of this year's graduating class at Haverhill high school and Miss Doris H. Colingill, 18 years old, of No. 338 Groveland street, a junior at the high school. A public announcement of the secret marriage last spring was made today by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Jones, of No. 32 Munroe street, this city, parents of the groom.

NUSSBAUM REFUSES TO DROP SUIT

Dave Nussbaum, ousted by police last, will not withdraw his petition ejectment and mandamus against Joseph O. Laffey, Jackson will not despite the latter's resignation. Denial of any such proposition was made Thursday by Nussbaum's attorney, Mr. Jackson, in behalf of his client. Nussbaum alleges in a Mr. Hayes has faced.

Decision in court Aug. 1st regarding the wealthy Malden contractor was announced by George S. Ryan, associate counsel for Nussbaum.

"There is no personal animosity of the suit being with Hayes," Attorney Ryan added.

Nussbaum, it was learned, is now in New York on business connected with the contracting on the Cunard steamship Berengaria.

WOUNDED HERO, CAST ADRIFT, BEGS FOR WORK

Soldier of two countries and neglected by both, Lieut. Herman L. Chatkoff is looking for a job which will give him a chance to support himself while fighting to win back his health.

This young man is known to his friends as "the soldier without a country." He was in Paris attending school when the war broke out and joined the Foreign Legion. At that time his parents were living in Revere. Chatkoff's present address is 47 Humboldt avenue, Roxbury.

Lieut. Chatkoff

After months of service with the Legion, Chatkoff was honorably discharged because of injuries. When he had recovered sufficiently to rejoin the Lafayette Escadrille, first as mechanician and later as a scout pilot. When the American fliers in that outfit were taken over by the United States army, Chatkoff was unable to be at the ceremony because of wounds which confined him to a hospital bed.

The last time he was hurt he was flying under United States orders but, fortunately, was still in the service of the French government. Neither country has settled the question of which is responsible for his care and treatment. He has been in many hospitals since returning to this country, most of the time through the friendly interest of private citizens. Outdoor work such as light farm labor would be the best thing for him now, the doctors say. He has many medals and citations for bravery but he lacks the essential thing—a job.

BROKERS' FIRM TO PAY 50 CENTS ON DOLLAR

Boston customers of Jones & Baker, New York brokerage house with a branch here which collapsed on May 31 last, will receive immediately 50 cents on the dollar and eventually may be paid in full.

This was announced from New York today after the adoption of a plan of settlement whereby the firm's receivership will dispose of securities and make immediate settlement. The firm failed for $10,000,000. A committee of customers and creditors has been at work endeavoring to solve the difficulty.

Customers who had bought securities outright and left them with Jones & Baker for security have been assured that their securities are safe and will be returned to them. Customers and creditors who had marginal accounts will have their claims liquidated at prices which prevailed for stocks the day the firm failed. A cash settlement of at least 50 per cent will be made immediately, more later.

Several hundred Bostonians were on the firm's books.

EARLY PASSAGE OF BONUS SEEN BY SMOOT

By GEORGE W. HINMAN, JR.

Washington, July 3 (U.N.S.).—The soldiers' bonus bill will be enacted by the next Congress.

The sales tax offers the only practical method of raising funds for its payment.

This was the firm conclusion emphasized by the capital today by Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, national ranking government fiscal authority and ranking Republican on the Senate Finance Committee.

Senator Smoot expressed his determination to advocate vigorously the adoption of the sales tax as an integral part of the bonus measure.

President Harding, he said, would not veto the bill if it made provision for financing the payment involved, and the sales tax proposal offers the only reasonable source of revenue.

And the country at large, Senator Smoot asserted, had become better informed as to the true application and merit of the sales tax. Farmers and workers, he said, had begun to realize that it was not an instrument for transferring the tax burden to the shoulders of those least able to bear it, but was rather the logical method for making tax payments proportionate to the means of the individual taxpayer.

"Talk of using the interest paid on the foreign debts owed the United States is unsound," declared the Senator. "The law states specifically that this interest shall be used for a special purpose, the payment of our bonded indebtedness."

With preference to domestic problems, Senator Smoot said he believed the first subject to come before the new Congress next December would be revision of the transportation act along the lines advocated by President Harding in addresses on his Western tour.

BEER WITH A 'KICK' COUSENS' PLATFORM

Detroit, July 3.—Declaring that an appetite for mild beer of 2½ to 5 per cent content is no worse than an appetite for tobacco, tea or coffee, Senator James Cousens reiterated his advocacy of modification of the prohibition act. "The Volstead Act is my issue henceforth," Senator Cousens asserted. "I don't figure on any man denying me the right to satisfy my appetite for tobacco. Beer with a limit of 5 per cent alcohol will satisfy the appetite but is not intoxicating."

7 BANDITS ESCAPE IN $38,306 HOLDUP

St. Louis, July 3.—Police of St. Louis and surrounding cities are hunting for seven bandits fleeing in two automobiles with $38,306 in currency, which they obtained in a daring holdup of the offices of the United Railways Co.

Officials of the company, who said the money was insured, express the belief that the robbery was an inside job because the raid was carried out so speedily and systematically.

INSURED AGAINST RAIN ON HOLIDAY

Rockland, Me., July 3.—What is thought to be the first rain insurance ever taken out in Knox County is that part placed with the E. C. Moran Company by the committee in charge of the Vinalhaven Fourth of July celebration. The committee, which has planned a big day, has insured its plans to the amount of $600.

Two Cops All White After Flour Cart Breakdown

Who's going to pay for cleaning the uniforms of "Big Bill" Desmond and "Babe" Adams, City Hall avenue cuppers?

It's all Joe Sutvek's fault!

Joe was driving along Washington street with a wagon load of flour.

At Bromfield street he tried to turn out of the street car tracks. Result—one broken rear right wheel.

Traffic was blocked so the cops had to help dig sacks of flour from the wrecked wagon to the curb. And their uniforms were all white at the finish.

MUCH LESS DRINKING ON S. S. BERENGARIA

Southampton, July 3 (U.P.).—Passengers on the Berengaria, which docked here today, told reporters there was much less drinking than usual on the voyage from New York, but that by doctors' certificates they were able to get all the booze they required.

Many persons brought bottles with them from America, one passenger having forty bottles aboard.

5 P. C. BEER BILL IN NEXT CONGRESS

Washington, July 3.—Returning from visits with dry leaders in the East, Representative Dyer of Missouri, Republican, said a decision has been reached to introduce a bill on the opening day of Congress fixing the alcoholic content of liquor at 5 per cent.

Mr. Dyer is hopeful of favorable action on the measure. It will be referred to the Judiciary Committee on which he is next in line to the chairman, and he believes it can be reported out promptly.

Mr. Dyer's optimism is based upon personal investigations he has made of sentiment on the liquor question in various parts of the United States.

FRANK ARCHER says:—

We are in greatest need of Moxie Empties. We must have many thousand cases each day.

The month of June was the greatest in our history. We manufactured and shipped more Moxie than we did the first ten years we were in business fifty years ago.

Our millions upon millions of loyal Moxie fans have never disappointed us. We are sure they will not this time. Please return to your dealer every case of Moxie Empties possible, and they in turn will return them to us for refund.

While orders for Moxie exceed our supply by thousands upon thousands of cases, we are dividing up each day's production as equitably as possible. We assure you we will do everything in our power to keep you supplied, and if there are any delays in any manner in shipping to you, we know you will feel sure it is caused not by neglect, but that it is an absolute physical and mechanical impossibility to do better.

LONG BEACH SAND LIZARDS' DRAPERY BRIEF AND DAZZLING

NOT-MUCH SUITS ALL THE RAGE

Mermaids and Swain in Frank Petting Parties as Color Array Defies Rainbow

By CORINNE RICH

New York (U.N.S.).—Most anything goes at Long Beach, Long Island's continental and picturesque water place.

A bathing suit was today described by a policeman there in this way: "Well, you gotta have a little piece of some kind of cloth on you somewhere."

And only a "little piece of cloth" covered most of the bathing beauties who cavorted on the white sands.

There were no bars to absolute freedom and self expression in the matter of conduct, for daring and color. Long Beach has become an American Deauville.

I walked down the beach in the midst of the crowds, and this is what I saw:

Pretty girls, the chorus's best, in bright green and red and rose and yellow and blue suits. Backless, skirtless, not much below the hips in length, and supported only by two slender shoulder straps.

Beach capes, rubberized creations straight from French resorts, worn open from the neck down and possessed of some intriguing color that brought out the delicate tints of the flesh of arms and legs.

Striped, flowered and Egyptian figured, they formed brilliant embellishments to the costumes of the sand lizards.

PINK ROBES FOR MEN

No bathing shoes nor stockings. Pink toes were so much in vogue that the modest maiden who covered her feet found herself positively stared at. Some who desired attention wore gay socks with bright garters and powder puffs attached.

Otherwise, the waterproof vanity case was snapped to a trim belt.

Men's suits were even more "fit-me-quick than ever. Some were obscured slightly by silk crepe bathrobes, violet and pink and azure.

Beach umbrellas, anything but drab in tone, stuck in the sand at all angles, and pretty Jap parasols in the hands of promenaders added splashes of eye-squinting color.

Behind them, or in front of them, mermaids and their swains held the frankest sort of "petting parties."

Ukuleles and strains of popular airs everywhere.

The board walk by 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when the pageant was at its high-tide, swarmed with sight-seers, people who had come out for educational purposes. They stood at the rail three deep for hours, coming in and out for a good look.

BEAUTY SECRETS EXPOSED

Chuckles from the gallery did not disturb the tranquility and naivete of beach birds. They seemed totally unconscious of spectators.

Loose hair flying in the winds after a dip exhibited a hundred varieties of permanent waves. Beauty secrets went by the boards in many cases and flowing locks boldly proclaimed themselves wet and unwaved in spots of the same head.

If the not-much suits of the feminine gender were good to the eyes of beholders, they were much less kind to the skins of wearers.

Life-guards treated many cases of sunburn, and later in the day, when backless and skirtless suits were exchanged for sleeveless dresses, mottle arms and ivory shoulders had taken on the aspect of raw beef.

"You don't seem to have any bathing regulations here," I remarked to a policeman, standing discreetly out of the way of possible arrests.

"We kinder let 'em have a good time," he said, adjusting his shaded glasses.

DRUNKEN MOTORIST IS ASSESSED $100

Marlboro, July 3.—Charles E. Conway of No. 184 Spring street, West Roxbury, was fined $100 by Judge J. W. McDonald in District court, on a charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. He was also given a 30 days' sentence in the House of Correction on a drunkenness charge, and fined $10 on a charge of operating an automobile without having a license with him.

WORKERS BUY MINE, SCENE OF RIOTS

Springfield, Ill., July 3.—Purchase of the strip mine at Herrin, Ill., about which rioting a year ago took a toll of twenty-two lives, was reported here to have been effected by the Illinois Mine Workers, as a means of satisfying the heavy damage suits contemplated by W. J. Lester, owner of the mine. According to the information the price was $726,000.

BENJAMIN HEIRESS TO WED COUNSEL

ANNE M. BOLCHI BENJAMIN

When Anna Marie Bolchi was a little girl, her adopted father, Park Benjamin, New York millionnaire, told her that if ever she was perplexed about business matters, she was to be sure to consult her lawyer, Arthur Louis Fullman. After Mr. Benjamin died, Mr. Fullman took charge of his estate. Dark Cupid thereupon decided that Anna needed a legal adviser all the time and promptly sat down upon Mr. Fullman's law books and refused to budge until Anna said "Yes." And they are to be married in London tomorrow.

FOSTER SISTER OF MRS. CARUSO TO WED LAWYER

London, July 3.—Miss Anne Mair Bolchi Benjamin of New York, adopted daughter of the late Park Benjamin and foster sister to Mrs. Enrico Caruso, will be married tomorrow to Arthur Louis Fullman in the Catholic Church of Corpus Christi in Maiden Lane, off the Strand.

Mr. Fullman, who is a lawyer, was for many years the personal attorney of Park Benjamin and, since his death, has been custodian of the finances of his estate.

LIFE TIME ROMANCE.

The principals in the forthcoming wedding have known each other ever since the advent of little Anna Bolchi, into the home of the famous patent attorney, editor and author.

"Among Mr. Benjamin's last words to me, age of twelve years," said Miss Benjamin, "were: 'consult Fullman whenever you find yourself in difficulties.'"

Apparently Miss Benjamin found it necessary to follow that advice frequently, for in the few years since Mr. Benjamin's death the professional friendship ripened into love.

VISITED ITALY.

On May 10 the bride-to-be left New York to visit her childhood home in Italy. Fullman, busy with important cases, promised to meet her in London. He left New York May 29, and when Miss Benjamin arrived here ten days ago they began arrangements for the marriage.

The marriage, it was learned, might have taken place at an earlier day, but the fact that Miss Benjamin had not been domiciled in England for the time required by canon law, it was necessary, even under the present arrangements, to obtain a special dispensation.

That was obtained from Cardinal Bourne and ratified by Archbishop Hayes of New York, the application being cabled by Monsignor Daly of the archdiocese of Westminster.

The bride-to-be was confident it would reach London in time for the marriage.

The bride-to-be is a vivacious dark-haired girl apparently in her early twenties, and speaks with a pronounced Italian accent.

Melto Succeeds Where Other Reducing Methods Fail!

Every mail brings us grateful letters from men and women all over the country who tell us of the wonderful results they have had in reducing with Melto.

Of course Melto will succeed, even where other methods fail. Starvation diets, torturing exercises, medicines, drugs—these things are all so tedious, so uncomfortable, so uncertain in their results—and so hard to stick to.

Melto is simply a fine, rose-fragrant reducing cream which you apply locally —just where you are too stout or flabby—and it simply gets under the skin, melts the excess fat away, and leaves your flesh firm, your skin smooth, and your figure slim and gracefully proportioned.

It's so easy, so safe, so sensible, and so sure to reduce with Melto that it takes less than five minutes a day!

Don't spend another summer in discomfort. Begin using Melto now—today—and join the ranks of those who have reduced comfortably with Melto, just where they wanted to reduce.

Melto is absolutely harmless and absolutely certain of results. A large jar costs only $1 and lasts a long, long time. It means happiness for you this summer!

FREE—A valuable booklet containing much information important for stout people. Write for it today—don't delay.

BOY INJURED WHILE FIXING RADIO AERIAL

Two persons were injured by falls, one seriously. They are at the City Hospital.

Curtis Woolfe, 15 years old, of No. 21 Erie street, Dorchester, fell off a roof at No. 319 Blue Hill avenue, while putting up a radio aerial. He received multiple cuts and bruises and a possible concussion of the brain.

Mrs. Celia Anderson, 48 years old, of No. 7 Harsfield street, Roxbury, fell down the stairs of her home. She received injuries to both legs.

GRANDSON OF FORMER ENVOY TO TURKEY HURT BY PONY

New York, July 3.—When a pony with his father when the cinch of he was riding became frightened the saddle slipped and the saddle Henry Morgenthau, 2d, six years turned under him. His foot caught old, grandson of Henry Morgenthau, former Ambassador to Turkey, was dragged 500 feet. The accident occurred in the grounds of the Morgenthau country home at Hopewell, N. Y. The child was riding in the stirrup. Young Morgenthau was taken to the Vassar Hospital at Poughkeepsie where it was found that he had a fractured skull. It was said today that the child's condition is serious, but that he has a chance for recovery.

Crowds Breed Contagion

The Health Doctor says:

To keep well—don't touch things which many other hands have touched—keep hands away from nose, mouth or food—PURIFY hands as often as possible with Lifebuoy Health Soap—when you get up, when you retire, and especially before eating or preparing food.

HUMAN beings were meant to live in the open, guarded by the prophylactics of sunshine and pure air.

There is always danger of contagion in crowds—in factories, elevators, street cars, theatres.

Doctors and great health institutes have proved that most disease germs pass from one person to another by actual contact. Things which many people touch are always dangerous—car straps, public telephones, door knobs, books, soiled money, stair rails. Germs are carried by hands to mouth, nose or food.

In every crowd there are almost certainly several "carriers" of disease germs.

A "carrier" is a person who is perfectly well but who formerly had a mild, undiscovered case of diphtheria, influenza, measles, or some other illness. The person soon recovered and became immune to the disease but the germs multiplied by millions, harmless to the "carrier" but of deadly menace to everyone else. "Carriers" move about in every class of society. There are thousands of them.

There is only one protection from this danger—perfect, scientific cleanliness.

If you will purify hands and face frequently with a true health soap, especially after contacts with crowds, there is less likelihood of the germs entering your body through mouth or nose or passing on to your wife and children.

Lifebuoy Protects

Lifebuoy is a true health soap. Its creamy, copious lather releases a wonderful antiseptic ingredient which goes down deep in every pore, purifying—combating the menace of dirty things.

Soap cannot be made that is more pure, more bland, more beautifying than Lifebuoy. Its rich, nourishing oils of palm fruit and cocoanut keep the skin soft, free from blemishes—and purified.

You know Lifebuoy is a health soap by its wholesome, pungent odor. The odor vanishes quickly—but the protection remains.

Mothers—you who are "health doctors" to your families—guard those you love by placing a cake of Lifebuoy at every place where there is running water.

IF YOU STU-STU-STUTTER, WH-WH-WHISTLE YOUR DEFECT AWAY

FREE CLINIC OPENS IN BOSTON

Dr. Swift Gives Hope to Stammerers With New Relief Method

To stutterers and stammerers!

The more you whistle the better will you talk and the more distinctly will you enunciate.

This because of a peculiar action of the mouth muscles during whistling which aids the correction of vocal impediments.

Like puckered in preparation for whistling tend to steady the mouth for smooth speech, in time.

ALL ARE WELCOME

Dr. Walter B. Swift who conducts a free clinic for speech correction at the Wentworth Institute, Huntington avenue, during July is the authority. At this clinic all persons afflicted with any form of speech defects are welcome for treatment. During the month a gradual suppression will be accompanied by a mental-speech-diagnosis, as a guide for the proper cessation of stutterers and stammerers. Persons of all ages will be treated.

Dr. W. B. Swift

WALK AS YOU TALK

If you stutter, stammer or lisp, let while you are in motion, walk around when you talk, advised Dr. Swift, at his clinic today. What-ever causes your condition and helps to improve your speech, employ by all means"

If g, gi, or ci are difficult to pronounce a steady run slow grinding out of words beginning with those consonants should be practised. Repeat sentences like these, Dr. Swift advises:

TRY THESE:

The glory of gleaming glisteren glisten gorgeously.

The puny cat went down to the cellar, turned around, came up again and hid behind the kitchen door.

I came in the clinic to get a permanent cure for stammering.

They may seem hard at first, but just keep at it, he continues.

Can you pronounce vowels well? If not repeat them constantly and at every free interval.

"A (long), A (short), O (long), O (short), U."

Here's a substitute for the Coue formula:

Whistling and vowels for an hour a day.

Will drive hoe and hoe your stuttering away."

BABY FARM MYSTERY TRAGEDY

Mrs. Ann Siewers of Brooklyn paid $100 to a taxicab driver to take her and 19 children to her baby farm from Brooklyn to Schenectady, N. Y. Above are shown Mrs. Siewers and 15 of the 19 children she took with her. The woman said her Brooklyn neighbors objected to her baby farm so she decided to find a farm in upper New York State. During the long automobile trip up the State, two children became very ill, and a third died of pneumonia.

Mrs. Siewers, lodged at the Schenectady Alms House with her charges, frankly admits that the parents of some of the infants is doubtful, while others are the offspring of parents who have separated and boarded their children with her. She says she adopted this means of livelihood when her husband died. Two of the children are her own, while she adopted three others. Most of the infants are those left in her care.

MRS. SIEWERS TO CONTINUE AT BABY FARMING

Schenectady, July 3.—Hospital physicians reported today that two of the sickest infants brought here Saturday by Mrs. Anna Siewers after a trip of 167 miles in a taxicab are suffering from improper feeding since their birth two months ago.

No arrangements have been made for the burial of Arthur Carnel, 3 months, first victim of the excursion, who died of pneumonia.

His mother came here today and left without seeing the undertaker.

Mrs. Carnel made no inquiry for her dead baby while here. She left with her other boy, Richard, for return to New York.

The Carnels are estranged and the father read of the fate of his son in the newspapers. He notified officials here that he would arrive here tomorrow to claim the child's body.

Andrew Ferrell, six months, was taken away by his aunt, Mrs. Cornell, of No. 305 Amsterdam avenue, New York. Neither Mrs. Carnel nor Mrs. Cornell expressed criticism of Mrs. Siewers. They seemed to have implicit faith in her, regretting only that the Summer outing must be abandoned.

Mrs. Siewers will remain in the alms house here until she has made arrangements to return to New York. Officials will not permit her to leave until they are assured of her ability to get home without mishap.

Mrs. Siewers continues unapologetic about her action. She insists she meant only the good of the children and seems to think hard luck alone brought about the situation in which she now finds herself. While she has given up the idea of a farm in the country, she does not intend to abandon, for present, means of livelihood, the boarding of babies at her home in Brooklyn.

NAVY YARD PAY RAISE LIMITED TO FEW

Closing naval officials at Washington have misled the public by announcing that all workers at the Charlestown navy yard received a ten per cent increase in wages of receive July 1, a committee of fifteen members of the building trades craft representing more than fifty per cent of workers at the navy yard, visited the Boston American and informed this newspaper the building trades crafts at the yard have had their wages decreased instead of increased.

The building trades crafts at the yard labor in millmen, boatbuilders, plumbers, electricians, sheet metal workers, joiners, pipe fitters, sailmakers, upholsterers, and painters.

They assert that the metal trades workers at the yard, which organization takes in machinists, ship fitters, drillers and caliber representing, it is stated, less than 45 per cent of the employes at the yard, received the ten per cent increase in wages.

CANCER IN DIET, SAYS OSTEOPATH

New York, July 3.—Prevalence of cancer is due to American cooking and dieting, according to Dr. R. D. Emery, who addressed 2000 osteopaths at the opening session of the convention of the American Osteopathic Association in the Waldorf-Astoria.

"We know that the native tribes, such as the Indian and Esquimau, do not have cancer," he said. "Remove these natives from their habitat, accustom them to a diet, lack of exercise and vitiated air, and their vitality is lessened.

"As a result there is stagnation of blood and corresponding influences. Acidosis develops and irritation of the tissues results. Then follows susceptibility to cancer."

BLOOD-TRANSFUSION PATIENT RECOVERS

Principal Clarence A. Brodeur of the State Normal School, whose life was saved by blood transfusions from each of his three sons, has been discharged from the Brooks Hospital, Brookline, and, is well on the road to recovery. He has been removed to his Summer home.

Principal Brodeur's life had been despaired of before his three sons, Harold, Paul, and Dr. Arthur submitted to blood transfusions in the order named. Dr. Arthur Brodeur is a professor at the University of Pennsylvania.

REVERE BOYS PLAN REVENGE FOR 'TARRING'

Juniors of the Revere High School plan to get revenge tonight on the seniors who tarred and feathered their class president, Farrington Sanborn.

Sanborn was lured to a garage by two girl seniors and smeared with molasses and rolled in feathers by boy seniors while the girls looked on. The Junior president was then carried to a reception in City Hall given by the faculty of the school and forced to dance.

The hazing is a reprisal for the kidnaping of the senior president by juniors.

More than 150 members of the class, the juniors say, will mobilize secretly "somewhere in Revere." With sentinels posted to watch for police and seniors, the juniors "go over the top" at an equally secret "zero hour," and they hint at vigorous "mopping up" of their rivals.

Sanborn has disappeared since the hazing.

Will Directs Heirs Give Best of Care to Pet Dog

New York, July 3.—Specific provision is made in the will of Mrs. Alice S. Newhouse, who died June 11, at her home, No. 680 West End avenue, for the care of her pet dog, Champ. The will stipulates that the children "shall provide Champ with a happy and comfortable home, and see that he is buried when he dies in Hartsdale Canine Cemetery." It further provides that the dog shall be taken for a walk daily and be well fed and bathed.

"LITTLE CHURCH ON WHEELS" DEDICATED

Boston's new "little church on wheels," owned by a newly incorporated body of that name and to be conducted under auspices of the Y. M. C. A., was dedicated on the Durant grounds, formerly the old circus lot on Huntington avenue. The speakers were the Rev. Fletcher Parker, secretary of the Congregational City Missionary Society, and the Rev. Harry Freda, pastor of the Clarendon Street Baptist Church.

Following the dedication William H. Morgan, who will have charge of the church, conducted a service similar to that which will be held in the streets of Greater Boston.

BISHOP RULES CURATES MUST NOT OWN AUTOS

Worcester, July 3.—Bishop Thomas M. O'Leary has issued an order forbidding any curates in parishes of the Springfield diocese to own automobiles. The new ruling was issued during the retreat of priests at Holy Cross College.

Bishop O'Leary said curates who want to keep their cars could apply for a transfer from this diocese. He said he considers it best for the general welfare of the church that curates should not own machines.

A similar ruling has been in effect in the Providence diocese for the past two years. Many local curates are affected by the order.

WALKOUT EXPLAINED BY FAHEY

Gillette Company Official Defends the Bonus System; Denies Wage Cut

Frank J. Fahey, vice president of the Gillette Razor Company, today issued a statement in which he denied that 1200 workers of the South Boston factories were on strike or that the company had any intention of lowering wages.

"We have made a favorable adjustment of wage rates," the statement reads. "The bonus system has been very successful in the razor departments, increasing the operators' earnings an average of 30 per cent., with some employes making a 100 per cent. bonus."

Conflicting statements have been current regarding the number of employes who have joined the walkout which started on Friday last and as to what caused it.

"Trouble began," reads Mr. Fahey's statement, "over a slight misunderstanding and the discharge of an employe. Investigation showed the foreman acted hastily and the employe was immediately reinstated. Later came demands for time pay and the abolishment of our bonus system to employes in the wrapping department."

SAYS 223 ARE OUT.

Regarding the number out the statement continues:

"About 75 p. c. of our blade department went out on Friday. This number was increased during Saturday and Monday so that now about 225 are out from a total of 1100 employes. The company has always tried to deal fairly with its operatives, never had strikes and we do not believe this strike will be of long duration. Meantime our razor department continues at high speed."

The strikers met with officials of the American Federation of Labor in Maynard Hall, So. Boston, on Monday night preparatory to forming a union. Fireworks set off outside proved an interruption until persons responsible, who said they were hired to heckle the meeting, were driven off.

The principal speaker at the meeting was Frank H. McCarthy, state organizer of the A. F. of L. He said, "You have always left the making of your industrial conditions to the employers instead of organizing a union. The A. F. of L. is not an organization that encourages strikes; it does just the opposite. A strike is called only when we cannot get justice, fairness and a square deal. Strike if you cannot obtain what belongs to you in any other manner."

2 CHILDREN HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Two South End children, a boy and a girl, were hurt in auto accidents near their homes. Both were treated at the City Hospital. Madeline Crowley, twelve years old, of No. 47 Waltham street, South End, jumped from an automobile bringing her to her home before it stopped, badly injuring her leg. Walter Bush, seven years old, of No. 19 Ross street, while playing in front of his home, was struck and knocked down by an auto operated by Frank W. Strickland of No. 184 Washington street, Dorchester, receiving cuts and bruises.

HUB GIRL BRIDE OF COUNT

Miss Mary Thayer Becomes Countess de Comminges at Brilliant Ceremony

Paris, July 3.—Count and Countess Bertrand De Comminges were on their honeymoon today, following one of the prettiest weddings of the season at the Church of St. Honore D'Eylau in the Passy district. The countess was Miss Mary Allen Van Rensselaer Thayer, daughter of Mrs. S. Rensselaer Thayer of Boston.

After the honeymoon of several weeks the couple will reside in Paris. They expect to visit America in the Fall.

The witnesses were Baron Edmond De Waldner for the bride groom and Ambassador Herrick and Count Jamie DeMontgomery, brother-in-law, for the bride. The bride was given away by her cousin, Judge Walter Van R. Berry. She wore an embroidered Tulle veil over orange blossoms. Her children of Countess Montgomery, were train bearers and Miss Dorcas and Miss Natalie Porter, in white dresses trimmed with silver, were flower girls.

The bride's dress was of white satin, with a magnificent court train, and falling to the end of the train the gift of the bridegroom's family, was the bridesmaid's present, which was lavender orchids. She received many superb presents, the gift of the bridegroom's family being a diamond tiara. Mrs. Thayer gave her daughter a diamond brooch and bar pin. Count Comminges's present to his bride was a pearl ring. Other gifts included a diamond butterfly from her grandmother and a complete chest of silver.

COUNTESS MOROM.

Former telegraph operator and actress, who won a gilded husband, is suing for divorce at Providence. (I. N. S. photo.)

Providence, July 3.—Immediately after the Ethel Barrymore divorce suit is heard today it was expected the suit of Countess Morosi would be taken up, and to that end the beautiful Countess arrived in the city prepared to testify should she be called.

The Countess' arrival caused a stir in the Biltmore Hotel. She is both beautiful and fashionable. She was summoned by her attorney, Joseph W. Grimes, who declared her testimony would probably be sought.

If the Barrymore suit neither the famous actress nor her husband, Russell Colt, put in an appearance.

SEPARATED 4 TIMES, NOW SEEKS DIVORCE

After eighteen years Harry S. Wright of No. 4 Simonds court, Medford, has found married life a failure. He has filed suit for divorce from Harriet M. Wright. He charges her with unfaithfulness and names Harry Craigo. The Wrights have a son, Harry, Jr., sixteen years old.

Wright, who is employed on the Boston & Maine railroad, alleges that he has been long suffering in his endeavors to keep his matrimonial sea straffited.

"Four times we have been separated," he says, "but each time I have taken my wife back and tried to make her happy. But it was no use. We are separated now for all time."

THIEVES PREFER GUN TO A WATCH

Robbers entered the pawn shop of John Nagle at No. 162 Broadway, South Boston, and took swords, guns and knives with them. All other jumbles in the store were undisturbed outside of a few watches.

CHINESE DON JUAN SHOWS ARDENT NOTES PENNED BY WHITE GIRLS

By JO SWERLING.
Second Article in a Remarkable Series

Sammie May loves to visit the tearooms of Boston's Bogus Bohemia on the Hill, and exhibit to his admiring and frequently envious confreres tear-stained love letters sent to him by adoring white girls.

He is the Celestial Don Juan, Lee Chong Shing of the village.

He can tell they adore all right. There's amore in roumen, sometimes because of their kimonos with complacency and pow. Sammie May not only negates in Latin dances and art dresses and shows the letters.

All sorts of flames and jetsams float in the lingwash on the Hill. The East is East, and the West is West, and there the twain shall meet.

Recently this suave, amorous China boy, former student of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was arrested in a raid on this apartment, with a white girl. His case came up before Judge Hayden. The judge warned him.

WHITE GIRL'S STORY.

"I have heard that you make it a habit to run around a great deal with white girls," he said. "It's got to stop. If I hear of you running around with any more white girls, it won't faire so easy with you."

Sammie May is running around with white girls.

He is running around with one white girl arrested with him in the raid on his flat. The fact that that girl has just come out of a hospital, where she fought a fearful fight with dope.

Sammie May is running around with this white girl. He is running around with another white girl. Sammie has it all fixed. They are to go to Providence, and get married there. Then they will return to Boston, and the girl will go back to her parents, who do not dream that she even knows Sammie May. Then, sanctified by marriage they can continue the relations which have been maintained for the past five years.

I am going to tell you the story of this white girl, just as she told it to me. She is only fourteen years old. She was only fourteen when she met Sammie May, who took her to the tearooms of the hill and spoke to her of free love.

She has always lived a sheltered home life, protected by the care of a loving father and mother, comforted with the comradeship of brothers and sisters. She is a high school graduate.

FASCINATED HER.

"You have promised not to tell my name when you write the account," she said. She is so pretty, this little girl, so fragile. You wonder how long she has been wearing her hair up.

"If you do happen to use my name, of course there will be only one thing left to do. I shall jump into the Charles River.

"I met Sammie May five years ago. He absolutely fascinated me. I fell in love with him. I have loved him ever since. I love him today. I know that he has loved with other girls during those five years. I know their names. He has shown me letters they wrote to him—such letters. They made me cry. I have written such letters to Sammie May. I wonder what men and women he has shown them to?

"But that doesn't matter. I was a good girl when I met Sammie. And Sammie is the only man I have ever loved.

"My folks never knew about Sammie. He speaks English perfectly, and when he calls up, nobody suspects it is a China boy. I have never been away from home for a single night. My people don't know.

SHOWS THEIR LETTERS.

"He wanted me to go to his apartment, but I wouldn't. I loved him, but I was afraid. He wanted me to go to hotels, but I didn't dare. Then one day he told me about a place where 'everything went.' It was a Bohemian place on Beacon Hill—the Koffee Klub, on 35 Revere street. The place was 'a breath of Byzantine' he told me. There was a check room. We went there.

"Sammie had taken other girls there. He told me about one—gave me her name—and he told me how beautiful she was. Then he showed me a letter she had written him. 'If you don't come back to me, one bad night, I shall start out on my motorcycle until I get to a precipice, and then I shall drive over.'

"But that didn't stop me. We came there many times. Well—you know what happened. If was an old story with Sammie, I suppose, but it sort of frightened me.

"Then, just as I was getting better, I heard about the affair Sammie was having with the other white girl. He called me up one day and I told him I never wanted to see him again. I meant it, too. But the day after his apartment was raided, I called him up.

"I asked him to forgive me for being so harsh. He knew I told him that the other woman didn't matter, as long as we still loved me. He said he did, and I asked him to meet me.

"We met on the Keyway that night. He wanted me to go to a hotel with him, but I wouldn't. We stayed in the Keyway.

"Since may notes that Sammie has been home sick. I have not called him. I believe he need meeting his other girl. But it doesn't matter, since Sammie. He wants to marry me. He wants me to go with him to Providence, and then there'll be nothing wrong about our relations. We can keep it a secret, and I can come home each day on the hill. Sammie knows all the places on the hill.

REVERTS TO CASTE.

He's a wonderful boy, Sammie. He just makes me love him. No matter what my head says, my heart always reaches out to Sammie. If he spat on me I would kneel and kiss his feet. I love him."

That's the little girl's story.

Sammie May has reverted to caste. For late weeks he has been living in Chinatown, in the manner of his ancestors. Last week he was employed in a store selling and demonstrating the new Chinese game—Mah Jong.

But on the side Sammie was practicing another game—his own little Chinese game. Giggling young girls came to the counter and wanted to know what the funny game was like. With a gentle smile in his softly modulated tones Sammie May would tell them.

And in his little red notebook he would enter names and addresses and phone numbers.

GAS TUBE IN MOUTH, JANITOR FOUND DEAD

When Eugene A. Woodbury, 75 years, old, janitor at a Roxbury bank at No. 114 Dudley street, did not report for work today officials notified the police. Woodbury had gone home sick the day before. Breaking into his room at No. 30 Akron street, Roxbury police from the Dudley street station found him dead with a gas tube in his mouth. He had no relatives living.

SCARED BY CRACKERS, MAN BREAKS SKULL

Excited when a group of boys tossed a bunch of firecrackers behind him, today Lawrence Collins, forty eight, of No. 823 East Fifth street, South Boston, stepped off the curbing on West Broadway, lost his balance and sustained a fractured skull when he fell. His head struck the sharp edge of the curbing.

MAN AND WOMAN COLLAPSE IN HUB CAR TERMINALS

A man and a woman, who collapsed in car terminals while waiting for cars, are at the City Hospital. The woman is in a critical condition. Mrs. Lydia Fisher, fifty-two years old, of No. 582 Hyde Park avenue, Hyde Park, was taken sick at the forest Hills station. She is on the danger list. Dana Currier, twenty-five years old, of No. 16 Melbourne street, Ashmont, a World War veteran, collapsed at the Milton car barns. At the hospital it was said that he was suffering from the effects of being gassed while overseas.

SPRINGFIELD MAN DYING AFTER SIX-STORY FALL

Springfield, July 3.—Henry Chase, an elevator operator employed in the Court Square Theatre Building, fell six stories into the elevator well today. He is dying at Springfield Hospital. His home is at No. 32 Wilcox street.

The accident occurred when Chase reported for work. Believing the elevator was at the sixth floor he unlocked the floor door and stepped into the well. He was unconscious when found.

MINOR IN U. S. 18 MONTHS HAS WHIPPED TWO POLICEMEN

Lowell, July 3.—Daniel O'Keefe has been in this country about 18 months, and in that period, it is alleged, he has whipped two policemen. He is a minor and about five feet three inches. Judge Thomas J. Enright of the District Court warned him he is in danger of being deported. He was placed on probation.

GIRL FOILED IN SUICIDE "TO KILL BEAU"

Miss Catherine J. Brown, eighteen-year-old girl, of No. 93 Waltham street, South End, failed in her attempt at suicide by taking lodine, threatened to kill her sweetheart, "Bill Brown," and herself if he fails to visit her while she is confined at the City Hospital. She refused to reveal Brown's real identity.

"I have kept company with Bill for the past two years and I love him very much," she declared. "I have sent word to him through my chum to come to me and tell me that he loves me while I lie here suffering.

"It may be true that I did go to a party on April 19 last, and drank some liquor, but it was the first time I had ever taken it and was very sorry and told him so. He said that he forgave me, but after that I saw less and less of him.

"When I saw him come walking down Massachusetts avenue with another girl, it was more than I could bear. I drew out a razor, which I carry in my handbag, and would have killed him if he hadn't run away.

Miss Brown said that she left home and school to live in her little attic room for the sake of "Brown." She is expected to leave the hospital in a day or two.

Town Laborers Get Raise

The Brookline Selectmen voted to re-establish the pay of town laborers at $4.50 a day. Last year the pay was placed at $4.25.

GIRLS ESCAPE FROM LOCKUP AT BEACH

Salisbury Beach, July 3.—Two young girls, arrested in a cottage in the South End on charges of disorderly conduct, escaped from the police station by forcing the door of their cell and sliding down some blankets hung from a back window.

The girls were later recaptured in the cottage where they were first arrested after the entire town had been combed for them.

The girls gave their names as Mrs. Alice Dow, seventeen years old, of Salisbury, and Miss Edna Hewitt, fifteen years old, of Newburyport. Arraigned in Amesbury Court, the girls were found guilty and their cases were continued for disposition.

After their removal to the police station, the girls raised a commotion in their cells. They tore the bedclothes into shreds, broke the electric lights and fixtures and disturbed the entire neighborhood by banging at their door of their room.

The door of the room finally yielded to the blows they directed at it. They went out and made their way to a second story window, from which they lowered themselves to the marsh below by means of two blankets, tied together.

ANDOVER MAN'S NECK BROKEN IN CREEK

Andover, July 3.—David Eastwood, 44, an employe of the Andover highway department, was killed today when he fell into a brook while walking through a field. His neck was broken.

STORROW RAIL BOARD TO ARGUE AT U. S. HEAING

Rockland, Me., July 3.— The first action of the Governors of the six New England States on the Storrow report recommending plans for the consolidation and rehabilitation of New England railroads came when James J. Storrow and other State chairmen of the railroad committee were appointed a special commission to represent New England at the coming hearings before the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

The hearings are to take place in Boston within two weeks for the purpose of obtaining New England opinion relative to the plans proposed.

The appointment was made before the close of an outing which Governor Baxter provided for Vice-President Coolidge and the Governors. A statement commending the committee report was signed by all the Governors except Governor Frederick H. Brown of New Hampshire.

Many residents of Maine oppose the consolidation plan for the Boston & Maine, Maine Central and Bangor & Aroostook. The two smaller roads are in very good condition and objection is raised to their participation in the indebtedness of the Boston & Maine.

The rehabilitation plan for the Boston & Maine, however, has caused the opposition to be outweighed and has resulted in a favorable attitude toward the committee.

Arrangements were made by Governor Baxter for another conference of the governors in August preparatory to calling special sessions of the various state legislatures in October on the report of the Storrow Committee.

BEDFORD TEACHER DIES IN HOSPITAL

Miss Annie May Griffin of Bedford, for a number of years principal of the Faulkner Kindergarten School, in North Billerica, died in the New England Hospital, following an operation. She was prominent in church and social life in Bedford. One of the three brothers is the Rev. Frederick Griffin of Philadelphia, Pa.

MEDFORD MAN'S AUTO SURVIVES WILD TRIP

A small touring car, owned by Joseph Splaine, a Medford plumber, on which he neglected to set the brakes tightly, started 100 feet down Hillside avenue, in that city, across High street, crashed through an iron fence and down a ten-foot embankment. No one was in the car at the time and, despite the wild course, the car was but slightly damaged.

HURLED INTO PATH OF TROLLEY; DYING

Michael Cepolino of No. 43 Brock avenue, Roxbury, is dying at City Hospital from injuries suffered when thrown from an ice wagon which was struck by a street car today at Dudley and Burrell streets, Roxbury. He has a fracture of the right collar bone and other injuries.

THE WAYS OF A HUSBAND—By ANN LISLE

A Splendid Sequel to the Famous Story of Wedded Life, "When a Girl Marries"

HOW THE STORY STARTS

Jim and Anne find happiness again on a honeymoon spent in the apartment of Betty Winston, loaned for the occasion. They go to Dreamwold for a Sunday dinner with Jeanie and are met in the grounds by Rosa, who ignores Anne. Rosa advises the discharge of Mabel Storrs to save the big salary. This Anne resents. Evvy helps Anne arrange her apartments and a dinner is given as a housewarming. Phoebe grows hysterical on receipt of Carlotta's wedding invitation. Betty speaks to Anne about Ralph's fondness for the latter.

By Ann Lisle

WHEN my maid interrupted with an apologetic announcement that she hadn't heard me come in and would like to give me a message if I had a minute, "the message was from Betty. Our new client had reached her telephone and had insisted that we come to his office for a conference. Not wanting to take me from Neal, Betty had gone, saying that I was out at home and couldn't be reached until too late. The meeting undoubtedly would last all evening, so she would go directly home from it.

"Isn't that just like Betty?" I commented. "She was bound to leave you free—"

I snapped off my own words. Suddenly their implication came to me. Betty had left me free to enjoy myself with Ralph. I felt my cheeks warming to crimson. I rushed on: "You run Jim over off on a trip." Then I added lamely, with a sense that Jim had to be justified before the bar of Susanna May's keen gray eyes, "He wouldn't have gone—only Phoebe is so much better."

"Has Jim seen Phoebe?" inquired Aunt May innocently.

"I only saw her today," I replied, wishing that I didn't feel as if Jim was being—shown up.

A Proud Godfather

Then Ralph did the first awkward thing I've ever known him to do. He seized on me.

"You're not Phoebe tomorrow?" he cried. "The blessed little thing has asked for me. I'm as proud as Pride."

"Of course you are!" agreed Susanna May, in a voice that fairly grew three inches for Ralph.

"And I've seen Miss Baby several times," Ralph went on. "She's a sweetheart, Aunt May. You'll be as proud as Pride also when I tell you your nephew is to be godfather."

"There," cried the little aunt in a crisp, gratified tone, "I tell you folks get what's theirs—always in the end."

She fixed me with clear, snapping eyes that deepened as they held my gaze with their own unfaltering surest purpose. Then she said tenderly:

"Ralph, you love little helpless things. You love little growing things, too. So would Anne. I've a lovely garden. A new garden with nothing old to it but a sun dial to mark the pleasant hours. And I've a bird bath for the little scoundrels that peck our cherry trees. Now, Anne, I'll tell you what: no use, you being alone in this big place tonight. Max and I will take you home with us. And tomorrow, after he's seen Phoebe, Ralph will come out in time for dinner or tea or whatever he can make it. And he'll bring you home later. Isn't that perfect?"

"It's beautiful!" breathed Ralph fervently. "A day of—days."

The garden seemed to waft its perfume to me. I longed for its peace and beauty.

When Aunt Mary invited me to come out to the Hoadley place with her and spend Sunday I longed to—and couldn't.

I tried to tell myself that I didn't want to accept Max Hoadley's hospitality. But somewhere deep in my heart I knew that I'd taken fright at my sudden delight in the thought of spending Sunday in an old-fashioned garden—with Ralph Lacy.

"I—can't come," I said, then realizing how ungracious a flat refusal must sound, I added, hesitating: "I can't leave Neal.

I want to have Sunday dinner with him—and be with him for whatever time he's alone."

Susanna May fixed her eyes on mine. There was a twinkle in their depths, but there was also a look of pity. I felt panic-stricken. It seemed to me that she knew all I was thinking—and I wasn't myself quite sure where thought left off and chaotic feelings began.

"Perhaps Ralph will dine with Neal," she said, suddenly.

"He asked me to," replied Ralph quietly. "But if I can see Phoebe at noon, I'll come out to you as we arranged, and perhaps Anne is right about staying with Neal. He loves her so."

He lingered a little over the words. There was no mistaking that.

A Brusque Handclasp

"We all love Anne," cried the little woman, stumblingly. "We all want to see her happy. She does so much for all of us. There is so little any of use can do for her. Heigho! The garden's always there. Whenever you need any country air and feel as if a few old-fashioned flowers and an old-fashioned woman can do you any good, Anne—we're there! Now, I'll be running along. The cars waiting. I must call for Max."

"Will you give me a lift, Aunt May?" asked Ralph.

"You dear boy, I'd give you anything I could," she answered.

And something of the maternal passion of her tone to him went into her murmured good night to me: "It's old-fashioned love you crave, dear. And it's mothering you need. Remember, my heart and my garden always are ready for you."

Ralph's good night was a quick, almost brusque handclasp.

After they were gone I stood for a moment before the window of my living room, staring out across the shadowy roofs of the city. The stars gave a little brightness to the night. But the stars were very far away. All that seemed near was the dull dark. It was sweet and balmy. But it did not stir my imagination as did the distant stars.

Copyright, 1923, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

DO you remember the game you used to play in the long ago? Does life sometimes seem like the old game—in that lovely woman is the pivot round which swing the players?

Out upon a green, green meadow starred with daisies and other field flowers—the vacation-land of all the world, where imagination plays its pranks—SHE is serving as the leader in the childish game. How eagerly her comrades run!

Lucky, indeed, is he who is nearest her. Not only can he look into her eyes and feel the firm yet tender clasp of her hand—but he who's farthest from her is snapped at the end of the whip, headover-heels into the discard of forgotten things. But what does SHE care? She's thinking only of the one into whose eyes she looks so laughingly.

BAD DAY FOR DISPUTES

MONDAY'S astrological forecast points to anxieties and annoyances in business as well as in domestic affairs, although the trine of Jupiter to the sun should prevent any serious trouble or disappointment. From this figure is read progress and fulfilled desires, with the prospect of assistance from friends or those in high places.

Those whose birthday it is should experience good and lasting progress in spite of certain annoyances and vexations. Friends should assist in this, but disputes should be avoided. A child born on this day will hold important positions and have powerful friends.

PRODUCTION OF RAIN

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"Is lowering of temperature necessary to produce rain or snow? Does rising temperature bring dry conditions?—M. M. T., Everett, Mass."

GENERALLY, lowering of temperature is necessary to produce rain; a still lower temperature produces snow. The production of rain is called "precipitation," and for this to occur aqueous vapors, invisibly present in the air, must be condensed into water drops. Ordinarily the condensation begins when the temperature of the air saturated with aqueous vapor sink below the "dew point," i. e. below the degree of temperature at which, in given conditions, the aqueous vapor can remain uncondensed.

The amount of aqueous vapor or moisture required to saturate the air at any time depends upon the temperature. If the temperature rises, more vapor is required to produce saturation. If the temperature falls, saturation occurs at a lower point, and then a still further reduction of temperature causes precipitation of the vapor into mist or raindrops.

Minute particles of dust in the air act as condensation centers around which raindrops form. When warm air saturated with aqueous vapor is cooled by expansion, and if the cooling brings the temperature below the dew point, mist or rain is formed.

Rising temperature does not necessarily bring dry conditions. As we have seen, a rise of temperature may cause condensing moisture to retake the form of vapor.

THE HE MAN

SHE FLEW WITH HIM TO THE JUNGLE

By George Agnew Chamberlain

STRONG limbs creaked and cracked with reports like pistol shots and a shower of leaves fell with a faint clicking that could be distinctly heard as if through the interstices of the aeroplane that she had thought an hallucination suddenly ceased. Presently, smoke, pearl-gray, began to seep through the thatch of the roof.

Andrea came fully to her senses and called in a clear, high voice, "I'm here, White Man; I'm here, White Man." She repeated the cry steadily at short intervals until he shouted an answer. Following the sound of his voice, her eyes caught the gleam of his hunting knife, hacking away through the thatch and when, finally, his feet were thrust through the opening, she seized and guided them to a foothold. In another second he was standing before her. Even in the dim light she could see that his face was blackened, his eyebrows, eyelashes and mustache entirely singed, his hair burnt off in patches. "Oh! White Man!" she gasped, throwing out both hands toward him.

Slid Down Branch

"Drop it," said Trevor shortly. "Which way to the ground?"

She showed him. He slid down the branch until he struck the first cleat and waited there to catch her. "Come on, now," he said. "In thirty seconds whoever's left in this hell-hole will be baked."

From below them and outside the cala came the ululating of a thousand panic-stricken vicinity overlain but not dominated by the bellowing of MacCloster, issuing drunken and impossible orders interminglcd with horrible and obscene oaths. As Trevor and Andrea reached the platform at the main intersection of the tree's branches the pall of smoke that had been following close on their heels descended with a swirl and enveloped them. He turned, caught up her skirt and threw it over her head; then he seized her in his arms, buried his face against her breast and staggered blindly down the spiral stairway.

In the van of the smoke, almost as though its waves were being propelled by it, he stumbled through the exit into the cool air of night and a glare that paled the face of the full moon. He dropped Andrea to the ground, stepped over her and stood face to face with the raving MacCloster. On the instant the giant fell silent. He stared vacantly for the space of a second; then his ravaged face writhed into such an expression of sublimated hatred as no man lives to see twice. Murder wrote itself large across his features, slow murder with bare hands for this enemy who had sent up in smoke and flame the one beloved earthly possession of the wreck of a life. With a choking gulp that seemed to rend his throat he charged, head down, arms thrown wide, talons clutching in anticipation.

His mouth twisted in a thin smile. Trevor shot from the hip. The bullet of the heavy service revolver caught MacCloster in the shoulder and spun him around three times. Trevor fired again. The giant's body seemed to waver in air, then crumpled and fell sprawling toward the gun, face down.

"You've killed him," sobbed Andrea, still on her hands and knees.

"In a way," said Trevor calmly and half to himself. "He really died years ago."

The memory of that tragic moment, strangely enough, was not to live in Andrea's mind by reason of the sight of the collapse of MacCloster's bulk but by what followed immediately after. Never could she forget the sudden stilling of the ululating and the instantaneous smile, broadening into a grin, that dawned on the face of every native.

Barbaric Chant

"O, lo, O, lu, O, lo—la," presently declaimed one, or words to that effect, and they began in absolutely casual tones:

"The White Elephant rushed to meet death."

Chorus of grunts.

"He was in a hurry."

"Heng!"

"Death was in a hurry."

"Heng!"

"When they met, they danced."

"Ho! Heng!"

"They danced around three times!"

"Heng!"

"The White Elephant reared like a bush-buck."

"Heng!"

"The short gun barked like a bush-buck."

"Heng!"

"Greater than the elephant is the little ant!"

"Ho! Ho! Heng!"

Throughout this orgy of reminiscence, the black throng backed step by step before the terrific fire of the flaming cala. Their scorching faces glistened with sweat but their eyes hung greedily on the crumpled, sprawling mass that was all that was left of MacCloster. In the pleasurable surfeit of the moment they were careless of the fact that the doom of the entire crual was fixed.

Trevor turned on them in a white rage and with a well-aimed bullet shot an assegai from between the legs of a great hulking brute whose mouth was slavering with revolting enjoyment of the scene. The black's face went gray with fright; his eyes came back with a snap from their sensual feast. Many of his companions laughed aloud but others only licked their lips in bestial hunger for more slaughter.

FLAMING YOUTH By WARNER FABIAN

The Great Reform Novel of the Year, Baring Innermost Secrets of Luxury-Loving Class

START THIS BIG, NEW STORY TODAY

Mona Fenniss, young, beautiful and the wife of a consulting engineer, has been told by her physician, Bob Osterhout, who is in love with her, that she has only a short time to live. Mona gives a gay party, telling Pat to go to bed, but the latter borrows a sister's dress, steals downstairs and has "a taste of life." Connie goes to a dance at the club and takes too much punch. She is brought home by Fred Browning, with whom she had uneventfully spent the night. Sel Thorpe gives Pat a "real" kiss. Mona dies and Constance receives a call from Cary Scott, her mother's first admirer. Scott is much taken with Pat. A party is planned for the Dangerfield's, to christen the new swimming pool. A thunder storm puts out the lights and the guests go into the water without clothes. Dee modestly hesitates on the balcony and then—the lights came on, revealing her in a blinding glare. One of the bathers is saved from drowning by Cary Scott. Pat and Cary Scott become interested in each other. Pat returns from school and declares she is "out for trouble" this time. Scott tells her he is "mad about her."

NOW GO ON WITH THIS ENTHRALLING STORY.

"PAT has too keen a mind to be frittered away on nothings."

"Has Pat been making love to you?" The question was put without the slightest alteration of the easy tone.

"Really, that's a question which—"

"Don't pretend to be shocked. Women always do make love to you, don't they?"

"You didn't," smilingly he reminded her, "at Taormina. Hence my blighted life."

"No. I preferred to have you make love to me. You did it so expertly."

"And wholly unsuccessfully."

"What did you expect? A correct young married woman going on to meet her husband by the boat! Would you have been so vehement if you had known me to be an unmarried girl?"

"I haven't made it a practice to make love to unmarried girls."

"Why select Pat, then?" She paused, giving him time to speculate upon what Pat might or might not have unintentionally revealed to this shrewd observer. "I was twenty-eight then," she pursued, "and I found you a dangerous woner, even though I knew it was not pour le bon motif. Pat isn't nineteen any more."

"Mademoiselle has taken the ordering of this matter into her own hands?" he queried mildly.

"Dieu m'en garde!" she laughed. "It is as an old friend of yours that I speak."

Prepared for the Worst

"Then I am prepared for the worst," he echoed. "Strike!"

"Still of a pretty wit." She spoke sharply, but her eyes were not without kindness for him. "Danger, Mr. Cary Scott! Danger!"

He did not pretend to misunderstand. "Let me assure you that I am not wholly without principle, Miss Fentriss."

"You? Granted. But what of Pat? Has my scapegrace little witch of a niece any principles whatever? I doubt it."

So, after all, he had misunderstood. "Are you, then, warning me of danger to myself? C'est a rire, n'est-ce pas?"

"It is not to laugh at all. I am serious. I have been watching you this evening when you were with Pat and when you were only following with your eyes. Your expression is not always guarded. If one has learned to read the human face."

He flushed. Then there came upon him the reckless desire to ease his soul of the secret which filled it. She had invited it, and he instinctively knew that to this serene, poised, self-sufficing, sage woman of the world he could speak in the assurance of sympathy and without fear of incomprehension or betrayal.

"It's true," he said beneath his breath. "I love her. I love her as I never dreamed it possible to love."

"And you've told her so." He made no reply. "I know you have because I know Pat. She's as greedy as she is shrewd; she'd know and she'd never be happy until she'd had it out of you. And then she'd be sorry and blame you for speaking."

"Yes. I've told her," he muttered.

"Inevitable that you should have. Not that it makes any particular difference, but you're still married, aren't you?"

"Yes."

"Any prospects of change?"

"Prospects? You!"

"Ah, well; I haven't an idea that Pat would marry you anyway. She appears to regard you as rather an elderly person, quite delightful to play with, but belonging to another world. Her infatuation will probably die out."

"Give me credit for being decent enough to hope and know that it will."

"Yet there is no certainty about it. Your appeal to her senses may be temporary. Doubtless is. But you have taken hold upon her mind to a degree which she herself does not appreciate, and that is a more profound and lasting influence. I wonder if you did it deliberately."

"No. Yes. I don't know whether I did or not. It may have been at the back of my brain all the time."

"That sounds more like Pat's honesty than your own diplomatic way of looking at things. It would be quite incredible that she has exerted a counter-influence upon you."

"Why incredible, since I love her?" was the quiet reply.

She gave him a swift, estimating glance before she went on: "I'm very fond of Pat, Mr. Scott. Most of my money will go to her eventually, unless I marry."

"Which is inevitable," he put in.

"Which is the most improbable thing in the world. And I want to see her happy. She has great possibilities of happiness, and great possibilities of tragedy. It is a tragic face, rather have you noticed that?"

"It is a face impossible to analyze."

"True enough. It has the mysterious quality that quite suddenly, Mr. Scott, you read over that type of face, though one doesn't find it in poetry or painting. I wonder why? Is it because genius doesn't dare that far, because it is unfranchisable even for genius? Perhaps it is genius in itself. Don't some poet say that beauty of a kind is genius? . . . What are you going to do with Pat, Mr. Scott?"

"Nothing. What is there to do?"

"Laissez faire! There's danger in letting things take their course, too. There is danger everywhere in this sort of affair. Let me interpret a little of Pat's mind for you. She is a combination of instinctive shrewdness, ignorance, false standards and beliefs, and straight thinking. There's an innocence about her that is appalling, an innocence as regards life as it really is. One might say that her ideas of its more intimate phases of life are formed mainly from trash, sex-sentimental plays and the more tawdry motion pictures that she loves. She believes that sin is always punished in the direct and logical way. If she should surrender to a man she would expect that to have a baby at once, should that man subsequently despise and abandon her; that's what the book-men drama teaches, or the ground, one supposes, that it's an infallible one for safety. And perhaps," continued the analyst thoughtfully, "it is. Though I'm rather for the truth myself. But there are other things taught in this same school that aren't so safe. Did you happen to read a book called The Salamander some years ago?"

"Yes, but I didn't think it so bad."

Don't Understand

"Because you're a man and don't understand what the effect of it has been. A fashionable school of fiction and drama has grown out of it. The central idea is that if a girl is 'pure' she can put herself into any kind of situation and any kind of chance with any kind of man, play the game of passion to the limit and yet emerge unscathed; virtue its own safeguard, and that sort of thing. Why I saw a play this Winter, which was written to prove that a girl of to-day could spend a night alone in a house with a man with whom she was in love without any thought of harm. Yet the censors suppress honest portrayals of life as it really is. It's a great book, Cary Scott, if your mind doesn't weaken. But I think mine has."

Pat, passing by on the arm of a worshipping partner, stopped to give them a smile.

"What are you talking about, you two?"

"You've guessed it; about you," returned the young man.

For a hidden moment Pat's eyes met Scott's and shot forth their ardent message before the sweeping lashes veiled down. "Leave me a few shreds," she called back gaily.

Pat considers herself a miracle of "shrewdness and knowledge," pursued the aunt. "Having been taught the gospel of sin and truth, she has developed a very high degree of virginal invulnerability. If anything in the world ought to be banned from the theatre it is that and its kind. It is the Salamander story of the Girl Who Always Comes Out Right. It isn't true. It isn't. I will not have it never has been true. Women aren't that way."

She let her pensive, gray gaze wander in the dancers' wheels. Pat had vanished, then return to meet Scott's

"I know," she said coolly. "Yes I tried . . ."

How and where, the measure of the Lolengrin Wedding March pounded through the church's many alcove and corridor than Herr Wagner ever intended that it should be delivered, unforeseeing that his minute directions would be unfavorable discounted off the stage in order that the bride might make her progress on the aisle look like a human being with a happy goal in sight rather than a crazy mechanism directed by a hidden and uncertain hand. Even to that halting rhythm, however, Mary Dora Fentriss, owner of her own name and her own maiden self for the last time, managed to walk like a poised and graceful young goddess in the arrangement of something more than the usual forms of admiration and excitement. T. Jameson James stood awaiting her, looking handsome, well-groomed, perfectly self-possessed, and even more self-satisfied.

Raised Her Head

As Dee turned she raised her head slightly—and let one slow look range over the gathered congregation, a gesture inscrutable to many, though the more romantic among the women deemed it unconsciously symbolic, as a farewell glance proper to the drama of marrying and giving in marriage. But Dee saw in that assemblage, both observers of humankind, both genuinely caring for Dee in diverse ways, read that look and were secretly disturbed.

The tenor caught his cue and swung into his part with all the impressement due to a highly fashionable occasion. The organ money proceeded, its gross symbolism of sex worship, lured vaguely on, and underlying acceptance of woman's slavery as a divine scheme, thinly cloaked in the sacred beauty of the words and Dee Fentriss was Mrs. T. Jameson James.

Returned to her father's home for the postsacramental festivities, Dee admitted Pat to her room where the last sticking was going on and was caught in a swift, hard hug.

"Oh, Dee! You looked lovely."

"Did I?" said the bride indifferently.

"You surely did. Where are you going on your trip?"

"Secret. Washington first. If you want to know."

Pat sensed, her voice though there was no one else in the room "just what you wanted to do . . . or course not. Don't be an idiot!"

"I do. No. I don't know as I would either, if I was crazy about the man." Pat, thinking aloud, did not see her sister wince. "I'd be too curious about what came next. You'll tell me, won't you, Dee? Everything?"

The bride laughed not even mirthfully. "Wait 'til you're old, infant. Though I believe that's what they always say and I don't know who else should. Had a good time?"

"The most priceless time!"

"That's right. I wish I could always be at the top of the heap, as you are."

"Sometimes I'm at the bottom. I'll make a poisonous grouch after this."

"Will you? You're a queer kid. By the way, do you know that Mark Darby is quite nuts over you?"

Dee's face had been an attractive but not highly intelligent blankness. Pat shrugged her shoulders affectedly to hide her satisfaction. "He's all right in his way."

"He rose to him tonight, will you? Yes, haven't shown him much."

"Last round," remarked Pat. "I wouldn't think Cary Scott was especially high speed, though he's a dear. You've been playing round with him quite a bit."

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman.

Separate Invitations.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In sending out formal engraved wedding invitations, is it necessary to send a separate invitation to each adult member of a family or is it sufficient to invite all, by sending one invitation addressed Mr. and Mrs. Williams and family?

M. M. G.

THE expression "and family" is not good form. One invitation should be addressed to "Mr. and Mrs. Williams." The invitation to the unmarried daughters should be addressed to "The Misses Williams." The invitation to the sons should be addressed to "The Messrs. Williams." These invitations, in separate envelopes addressed, should be enclosed in the large outside envelope which is addressed to "Mrs. Charles Fuller Williams."

FOXY GRANDPA STORY

HOW THEY FOUND LOST REINDEER

IT was a sad family we were visiting up in Lapland, I can tell you. Their very finest reindeer had wandered away and was lost. He had been gone three days and not a trace of him could be found.

As we left our Lapland friend's house, I patted him on the shoulder and said:

"Cheer up, my friend, perhaps we'll have luck today. We may be able to find your reindeer."

Off Bunny, Bobby and I trudged. "It certainly is a great loss to them," I said, as we sat down for lunch. "It is not only hard to lose a pet of which you are fond, but up in this country a reindeer is the most valuable possession any man can have.

"Reindeer furnish men with meat and fur and milk and they take the place of horses and automobiles. This reindeer was a particularly fine animal. No wonder our friend is sorry to lose him."

We finished lunch and then decided to go home because it was getting pretty cold and it looked as if it might snow some more. If it did snow, we might have had hard work finding our way back to the village.

We had hardly started when the snow came down heavily, and covered the ground so that we couldn't see even a trace of our footsteps.

"This is pretty bad," I said to the boys. "I don't know what we're going to do."

The words were hardly out of my mouth when off in the distance we heard a low moaning sound.

"What's that?" I said, "Somebody's in trouble."

Away Bunny bounded in the direction from which the noise had come.

Bobby and I followed, but we had hard work even to see Bunny because he was so white on the ground and his tiny footprints were soon covered or are filling snow. However, we didn't have to go far, for there, just ahead of us, lying in the snow, was a beautiful reindeer so weak he could hardly move.

I examined him, and was glad to discover that he wasn't hurt. Then Bunny came to him and reindeer talk. When he had finished creaking, the little fellow looked up at me and said:

"Foxy Grandpa, that is our friend's reindeer and he's just faint from hunger. He says that he can't break through the foot on snow on the ground to get at the grass underneath to eat."

"That's easy!" shouted Bobby. Taking his Boy Scout axe from his belt, and getting down on his knees he chopped a hole through the frozen snow right near the reindeer's head.

The reindeer nibbled away at the moss Bobby had uncovered, and in no time he was up on his feet. But now I was worrying about how we were going to get home. It was no fun to be out there in the blizzard with no idea of which way to turn. But it must have been Bunny's four lucky feet which did the trick, for as I was thinking, the reindeer leaned down and whispered something in Bunny's ear.

Bunny leaped into the air for joy, and shouted:

"Come on, Foxy Grandpa. The reindeer will guide us home."

What a long trip that must have been for the poor, weak reindeer, but he got home, all right! And what shouts of joy there were when our Lapland friends saw us come up to the door with the fine reindeer they loved so well.

nishings just as July requires the Glorious Fourth. Perhaps the Colonial furniture was there first, with the Washington portraits added as an afterthought, but be that as it may, they belong together.

Gomes himself might have sat in a Colonial chair, upholstered in chintz—not for him though it a good chair it is not. The octagonal table with the single pedestal fits right into the picture, and is useful to hold the Wedgewood vase and the big jar of peonies. The walls of the room are plain cream, the floors dark mahogany finish, and the rug is an Oriental with a small, rather bright design.

FAMILY MUTTON

Usually it is the father of the girl whom the trembling young man has to see when he wishes to propose, but sometimes it is the mother.

One such unfortunate called on his prospective mother-in-law at waretime with absolute frigidity.

When his mission was announced the mother nearly had a fit.

"No sir!" she exclaimed. "I have not encouraged your visits. On the contrary, I have opposed them. I feel you have taken a mean advantage of our hospitality —that you intend to steal our one ewe lamb."

Then the young man became angry, for he had received every possible encouragement.

"Madame," he said to the astonished woman, who expected and hoped he would go down on his knees in beg for the honor of an alliance with the family, "If I cannot have the family lamb you will excuse me from continuing this interview with the family mutton."

Bobbie and His Pa

By Wm. F. Kirk

THERE was a man went thru our town yesterday, he was pushing a little wagon & he was walking to the Pacific Coast on a bet. He was thin & all brown from the wind & sun & I felt kind of sorry for him.

Spare yure pity, Bobbie, sed Pa, that old geez is getting more fun out of life than a lot of fat bankers riding in there five thousand dollar autos, sed Pa.

I dident know, I sed. I like to ride in a auto pritty good. That is a awful long walk to talk, I sed.

It wud have been nothing for me in my yunger days, sed Pa.

What nonsense, sed Ma. Remember, sed Ma, I knew you in yure yunger days, sed Ma.

I could have made that walk with ease sed Pa. I was tuff as shoeleather when I was young, sed Pa.

How silly, sed Ma, why, sed Ma. I used to like you well yes walking to the theater, sed Ma in the happy days wen you & I were en-gaged sed Ma.

I am afrade you are losing yure memmery, sed Pa. I was a remarkabel walker in them days. The only one I ever took, sed Pa, that kind of knocked me out, sed Pa was the walk I took up to the church halter with thee, dearest, sed Pa.

Is that so? sed Ma. You were tired of yure prize seven that soon, were you? sed Ma.

Oh, no, sed Pa kind of quick & shaky, I realized how unworthy I was seven thos sed Pa.

I, too, realized that I was unworthy, sed Ma.

I am glad you realized it & hoop you realize it now, sed Pa. But we are all unworthy, dearest, sed Pa kind of quick, not one of us is what his loved ones thinks. We are all tiny specks of dust whirling on & on in the grate tornadoe of Time, sed Pa. I guess that aint such a punk figger of speech, sed Pa, I must say that outver, we are all tiny specks of dust whirling on & on in the grate tornadoe of Time. I guess thats poor, sed Pa.

Not bad, sed Pa, yure a much better talker than walker, sed Ma.

Wen I grow up I will walk across the nashun, I sed, & then maybe I will walk around the world.

Littel boys never know what they will do wen they grow up, Bobbie, sed Ma. You may become fat & lazy & not even walk to yure office, sed Ma, wen you are a grate man. For I know you are going to be a grate man, Bobbie, sed Ma.

I hoop Ma has got the rite doap.

The Champion

Jack Dempsey

Will Win in 4 Rounds, Declares Dempsey

By JACK DEMPSEY,
Heavyweight Champion of the World

Four rounds at the most. That's the length of time I give Tom Gibbons to remain in the ring with me in possession of all his faculties.

Of course he may be there kissing the well-known canvas long after the fourth round, but he will be done as a contender.

Tom is a good fellow and I like him, but fighting is a business with me and the old title of heavyweight champion has netted me and will continue to net me far greater return than my Liberty Bonds. I'm in no mood to allow Tom Gibbons to punch the pet goose that lays me such lovely golden eggs.

I've been interested in reading Tom's statements as to what he plans to do. Said into me with body punches until I crumple—that's his announced scheme of battle. Well, I admit I was once crumpled that way. It was when I was a kid and knew nothing about the game, and John Lester, a big negro, whacked me in the bread pan until he busted three of my ribs. That set me studying body defense. Since then you can count the men who have troubled me with body punches on the fingers of a hen.

It's tough on Tom, but he goes to sleep on or before the fourth round.

Will Kayo Champion, Says Tom Gibbons

By TOM GIBBONS

[illegible] ordinary school days, when the little girls in my neighborhood had a falling out, they used to scream at each other:

"Sticks and stones may break my bones, but names and faces never hurt me."

"I am going to spring that saying on Jack Dempsey when we step into the ring tomorrow. He's been making [illegible] upon us, much as old John L. Sullivan used to do, with the idea of scaring them into submission—and he's been getting away with it. But it will not work as I am concerned.

I'll go into the ring at the start and then I'll proceed right to the business of possessing the world with surprise. This young fellow changing Dempsey's made up mind [illegible] each expression of misery.

The old looks and jabs and uppercuts to the body are going to land often on Jack Dempsey that he'll think he's a snare drum and my fists are the drumsticks. Jack has been toppled before by body punches, and what has happened can happen once more. In fact, it is going to happen. I'm in the greatest condition of my career, punching harder and faster than ever before, and when I'm [illegible] with money behind this Shelby thing, I'm going to have a lot of fun and the title before I leave the ring.

"What a difference just a few cents make!"

That downright better taste—
By George, you just can't miss it!

It doesn't seem possible that a few cents can make such a difference. But your taste will prove it to your own satisfaction.

Fatima has a distinctive taste that you'll notice in the very first puff.

It's the taste of exceptionally fine tobaccos—perfectly blended to bring out every bit of their natural goodness.

It's a delicate richness, full of character, yet unusually mild—and you do not find it in any other cigarette.

As They Do in Utopia

By Les Conklin

"DADDY, will you give me thirty dollars?" asked pretty Georgette Pumpernickel as she playfully knocked a cigar out of her father's mouth. "I want to buy a new bathing suit for the beach party next Sunday."

"Thirty dollars," ejaculated Mr. Pumpernickel, "what are you going to do, buy a dozen of them?"

"No, only one," said Georgette, "but I have to get a sweater and a pair of bathing slippers to go with it, you know. You wouldn't want me to step on an oyster shell and cut my foot all to pieces, would you, Daddy, dear?"

"You've been out dancing so much all Winter that your feet ought to be tough enough to stand anything," objected her father. "And what's the matter with that expensive suit I bought for you last Summer? It ought to be in good shape because you spent all your time lounging on the beach instead of swimming."

"Oh, Daddy, it's all full of moth holes," protested Georgette, "and besides, it's out of style. The suits are going to be much smaller this year."

"Well, I suppose you can have the money," said Mr. Pumpernickel, "but this time get a rubber one so that it will last for a couple of years."

"Good morning, Mr. Neopolitan," said young Caspar Cuffinks as he entered the office of the Vanilla Ice Cream Company. "I would like a job in your factory."

"What qualifications have you?" inquired the president.

"Why, I used to freeze the ice cream for my brother every Sunday morning when I was a boy," replied Caspar, "and then I spent three years at college before they discovered that I was cheating in the examinations."

"What did you study when you were in college?" continued the boss.

"Not much of anything," admitted Caspar, "but I learned a little Greek."

"That's fine!" exclaimed Mr. Neopolitan enthusiastically. "You can go around and take orders from the candy stores. Our sales have fallen down of late because none of my men could understand what the store owners were talking about, and you ought to be just the man for the job."

"Darling, I thought you knew how to play tennis," said Ivan Hoe as his girl knocked another ball over the fence. "You hit at a ball like Babe Ruth trying to knock a home run."

"I can't help it, Ivan," protested Hortense. "I'm used to playing with old balls, and these new ones travel much faster when you hit them."

"But you shouldn't swing so hard," explained Ivan. "That makes the fourteenth time I've had to run down the hill and chase the ball."

"Why, you horrid boy!" said Hortense in tears. "How can you scold me like this! I've a good mind to break our engagement."

"Forgive me, dearest," apologized Ivan. "Hit them as hard as you want to. Next time we play I'll bring a bicycle along so I won't have to chase them."

DUMBBELLS

The guy who'll emulate Bo Peep today and let a few sheep roam especially in the vicinity of Wall street.

The high-collar galoot who really thinks that some day he'll win an argument from a telephone operator.

The old-fashioned feller who still insists that automobiles are playthings and that bicycles will come back.

The bird who still carries a watch that has to be wound with a key.

The mesdame who leaves fly-papes loose in an orphanage.

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

THIS is the time of the year when people are complaining about mosquitoes, but we never stop to think that maybe the mosquitoes are complaining about us.

JUST because some man happens to look swell that's no sign he tastes good.

A LOT of people are so skinny that if the mosquitoes had to depend upon them for food, they'd starve to death.

WHENEVER you see a mosquito biting a thin person it's because he's on a diet.

THESE insects have to be careful what they eat the same as we do. One mosquito bit a girl on the cheek the other day and died of painter's colic.

ANOTHER one got covered with powder from her neck and when he went home he was so white his folks thought he was growing old.

MOSQUITOES try to pick out tender meat, but not long ago one of them bit a taxicab driver and broke three teeth.

THEN for three days he buzzed around a dentist's office trying to make the dentists understand what he wanted.

FINALLY he climbed up in the dental chair and some customer sat on him.

MOSQUITOES are usually found around beaches. They like to bite bathers because they can see what they're eating.

TO a mosquito, a man in a bathing suit is like a cafeteria. The food is in plain sight.

NINE times out of ten, a person who is suffering will be bitten by a mosquito. Even insects like music with their meals.

FEMALE mosquitoes are terrible. They'll get on the back of your neck and, instead of biting you, they'll just stand there and talk and talk and talk.

BUT when a male one lights on you he means business.

HE stands on your neck and keeps his mouth closed, except when he's biting you.

LOTS of hotels and resorts advertise "No Mosquitoes." But the trouble is the mosquitoes don't read the newspapers.

YOU never find these insects hanging around the homes of poor people. The mosquitoes may feel sorry about their poverty, but there's no sense in both of them going hungry.

MILLIONAIRES are fortunate; they very seldom get bitten. The average mosquito can't stand rich food.

BUT it would probably be just your luck to get bitten by one of them who's on a diet.

ONCE OVERS

(Copyright, 1923, by International Feature Service, Inc.)

YOUR STRIVING HAS BEEN WORTH WHILE ALTHOUGH GOAL WAS MISSED

Perhaps you have striven for years for something which you have a great desire to possess, and you are still without it.

You feel your efforts have been wasted. But are they really wasted?

You have learned much you would not have known otherwise.

Some of the training you had to give yourself to be capable of the efforts you have made are worth much to you whether you attain the ultimate object or not.

Possibly, while failing to get what you started to accomplish, you may have gotten something much better.

It takes a very broad and understanding glance down the winding path of life to be able to analyze with an unbiased mind, especially when it is your own good which is in the balance against your desire.

Stiff disciplining it has been, and many a time you were at the point of giving up—you feel that way today; but do you dare give up, having gone so far?

To go as far as time, circumstances and pocket book will permit with your desires is pleasing yourself, isn't it?

To sacrifice for a great something in the end is worth while, so do not give up—keep going to the last ditch.

Explaining a Mystery

When Tutankhamen went to sleep
Three thousand years ago
The reason why he slept so deep
Is not so hard to show,
For then no flivvers fell apart
With rattles, jolts and squeaks,
And no one drove a noisy cart
Along the city streets.
No bawling child disturbed him
With piercing, plaintive screams,
And no alarms perturbed him
As he dreamt his peaceful dreams.

New Haven at Lowest in History With Prices Mixed in New York Market

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

Imagine having electric light at low cost brought to practically every home in America.

Imagine, also, cheap electric power in unlimited quantity brought to every farm and factory and furnace and forest and mine in the land.

This has now become feasible, and the prospects are that progress will be steadily made from now on towards this goal.

* * *

Readers of this column have already been told something of the plan prepared by an eminent practical engineer, Frank G. Baum, for establishing twelve regional power districts covering the whole of the United States, arranged in such a way that it would be entirely practicable to utilize advantageously our maximum natural resources for producing electrical and steam power and also to transmit this power to every corner of the continent. I have discussed this super-power scheme with leaders in the electrical industry, men who are sternly practical, and it has aroused intense interest. They regard it as a sort of Magna Charta towards which the industry must press, and thus save the country from the wastage of hundreds and hundreds of millions of dollars such as was incurred through the haphazard instead of systematic, construction of railroad facilities throughout this country.

* * *

Already the trend in this industry has been towards the establishment of central stations, the most notable leader in this direction having been Samuel Insull, of the Commonwealth Edison Company of Chicago. Would you ever guess that the investment in central stations already amounts to $5,000,000,000—roughly one-quarter of what it cost to build all the railroads in America?

* * *

Herbert Hoover, speaking recently on the value of "electrifying America," said:

"One of the incidental problems of our industrial system is the inevitable growing shortage of common labor and the necessity that it be replaced with fewer units of skilled labor performing the laborious tasks of the many. The more general spread of electrical power is inevitable for this reason, if for no other. The time is ripe for a great national program of super-power development. The stretch of economic transmission distance has brought power development from the mouth of our coal mines and upon our streams to within the economic reach of our industrial centers and our farms. Few appreciate the industrial revolution that lies pregnant in the 250 miles of transmission that is so well within economic possibilities. Nor does any engineer despair that we shall yet develop transmission to the thousand-mile radius. So 'electrify America' is not only a great economic purpose, but it is also a great human purpose."

* * *

The work already done by the twenty-nine million odd mechanical and electrical horsepower in America "is equivalent to about 250,000,000 workers when expressed in terms of energy." Think of that and only a fraction of our potential hydro-electric power has thus far been harnessed.

* * *

This is how Mr. Baum summarizes what should be done in order that the electrical power industry may take its proper place in the development of the nation's resources:

"1st. Develop the available practical water powers and connect these up with the big power markets and with the economical steam plants of the larger cities and steam plants near coal mines, through the medium of large-capacity transmission systems.

"2nd. Consolidate many of the small electric plants in the smaller cities into larger groups in order to get the economies of financing, management and operation that can be obtained only through larger utility units.

"3rd. Regroup the properties controlled by the 'holding,' operating and management companies so as to form more concentrated groups or systems that will make the problems of management much less severe than they are now and give better results.

"4th. Bring about the best power supply system for the United States by dividing the country into large regional power districts, so laid out that there will be brought into use the largest possible amount of water power, balanced as nearly as possible in the various regions with the steam power plants required for both light and power. The various regional power districts should be interconnected through means of high-voltage, large-capacity power transmission lines.

"5th. Build transmission systems for 60-cycle, 220,000-volt constant-voltage regulation, to give finally a universal power system for the United States."

* * *

Mr. Baum has prepared the most elaborate maps and charts and tables and plans and statistics showing how this gigantic task can be accomplished. It has been said that man can accomplish anything the human mind can grasp. America, having now visualized and grasped what ought to be accomplished, promises to show the world an example of what man can do.

Atlantic Gulf & West Indies sold off 2⅝ at 10½ to the lowest price in years.

Among stocks showing point or more losses were Baldwin, Beechnut Packing, Famous Players, Gulf States Steel and Stromberg.

Sears-Roebuck at 72 was up 2½ points. Pullman rose 2 points.

There were point or more gains for Standard Oil of California, American Locomotive, Bethlehem Steel, St. Paul preferred, on Pont, Houston Oil, Union Pacific and United Fruit.

Wall St. Gossip

AMERICAN Smelting & Refining Co. has reduced price of lead from 6.85 cents to 6.65 cents.

DAYTON Malleable Iron Co. announces purchase of Pratt & Letchworth Co., which has annual capacity of 10,000 tons of malleable gray iron and steel castings.

YOUNGSTOWN Boiler & Tank Co. received additional order for 30 55,000-gallon tanks from Corsicana Oil Fields of Texas. Total value of order exceeds $1,000,000.

SOUTHERN'S May showing was in keeping with the impressive records of earlier months. Gross of $12,948,547 was second highest in 1923.

YOUNGSTOWN Sheet & Tube has assumed full control of Steel & Tube properties and soon will begin a survey of its new acquisition.

INTERESTS close to Owens Bottle declare orders and inquiries received have indicated no prospective contraction in business generally.

UNITED STATES Industrial Alcohol has advanced prices 3 cents a gallon in all grades, making cheapest denatured 35 cents.

MOON Motor Co. May net before taxes was $16,452, making income for first five months $671,704. After taxes this is equal to about $3.30 a share on common.

FREIGHT loadings on Atchison past week were 34,010 cars, against 30,955 in the same week a year ago.

PROBABILITY bond prices will go still lower in next few months should not blind investors to fact that present prices might well be described as bargain level.

CLOSING of 90 p.c. of producing zinc-lead mines of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma field will prove most constructive as overproduction has forced zinc prices down.

PUBLICATION of report of Storrow committee on New England railroads drove New Haven to a new low for 1923, only ⅛ of a point above record low reached in 1921.

QUOTATIONS FALL IN COTTON FUTURES

New York, July 3.—Cotton futures were weak today, with prices declining from 22 to 29 points. Large selling orders in all options made their appearance, due to the easiness reported from the Liverpool market and yesterday's government crop report, which was considered a bear factor. July sold at 26.35, off 22; October at 27.90, off 24; December at 23.30, off 29; January at 23.12, off 25, and March at 23.10, off 22.

BONDS APPROVED.

To U. N., Friend street—Department of Public Utilities has verified to Bank Commissioner Joseph E. Allen as saving bank investments the following list of gas and electric companies' bonds, secured by a first mortgage of the franchise and property of the company, prima facie comply with the requirements of the clause entitled "Sixth" of Section 229 of the Acts of 1921, and Chapter 159 of the Acts of 1922: Amherst Gas Company, Arlington Gas Light Company, Brockton Gas Light Company, Boston Electric Light Company, Dedham & Hyde Park Gas & Electric Light Company, Eastern Massachusetts Electric Company, Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Brockton, Greenfield Electric Light & Power Company, Greenfeld Gas Light Company, Lawrence Gas Company, Leominster Gas Light Company, Leominster Electric Light & Power Company, Marlboro-Hudson Gas Company, Milford Electric Light & Power Company, Northampton Electric Lighting Company, New England Power Company, New Bedford Gas & Edison Light Company, Newburyport Gas & Electric Company, Old Colony Gas Company, Plymouth Electric Light Company, Quincy Electric Light & Power Company, Spencer Gas Company, Turners Falls Power & Electric Company, West Boston Gas Company, Worcester Gas Light Company, Webster & Southbridge Gas & Electric Company.

COPPER RANGE.

To S. J. J., Beverly—Copper Range Company paid $1 a share in April. Dividends to come will depend on the red metal market, none too good at this time, as you probably know, though improvement is hoped for.

Copper Range is a good example of a mining enterprise, which while generous with its stockholders during war years, maintained itself in strong treasury position. Company remained open when paralysis in the copper market compelled 90 per cent. of the copper producers to close down from April, 1921, till the Spring of last year.

In 1922 Copper Range including 50 per cent. of the net profits of Champion (whose 100,000 shares are owned equally by Copper Range and St. Mary's Mineral Land Co.) earned net profits of $331,683, before depreciation and depletion. This is equivalent to 84 cents a share on the 394,422 shares outstanding, compared with a profit of $235,183 in 1921.

Production last year (including 100 per cent. of Champion) totaled 29,029,474 pounds of copper, made at a cost before depreciation and depletion of 13.22 cents per pound. The company paid dividend of $1 per share in 1922, resulting in deficit for year of $62,735.

INTERNATIONAL NICKEL.

To R., Wayne street—International Nickel Company was incorporated in New Jersey in 1902, and in 1912 a new company was formed with the consolidation of the Colonial Nickel Company. The company mines, smelts and refines nickel and copper ore and markets the same. Smelting plants are owned in Canada and refining plants there as well as in New Jersey. A large new plant was placed in operation in Huntington, W. Va., last year to manufacture "monel metal." Property was valued at the end of the year at $50,717,000, and inventories were carried at $6,762,000. The company has no funded debt and capital stock is outstanding in the following amounts: Preferred, $8,912,600; common, $41,834,600; par of the latter $25. Earnings for the nine months ended December 31 resulted in a total deficit after preferred dividends of $383,000, against a deficit in 1921 of $1,042,000. Earnings during the war ranged from 13 to 31 per cent. on the common. Dividends have been paid regularly on the preferred, while on the common payments have been in irregular amounts. The last payment on this class was 50 cents a share March 1, 1919. On December 31, 1922, the net assets applicable to the common stock amounted to $51,407,000, or $30.75 a share. The company has reported progress in the last several months, but the common stock must be regarded as speculative.

DIVIDEND DECLARATIONS

Renfrew Manufacturing Co. declared quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on its preferred stock, payable July 2, stock of record June 20.

Investment Buying Showing Large Increase

A large increase in the investment buying of seasoned securities was reported today by large stock exchange houses.

Since the early part of last week the purchase of odd lots has reached large proportions.

Some of this buying represents re-investment of funds received in dividend and interest payments.

CHEMICAL BUYING TURNS DULL

Chemical buying has reached the point of dullness where there is little or no price shading owing to the fact that no inquiries come into the market to induce this cutting, says Drug and Chemical Markets. Values are about stationary, so far as the general line of industrial chemicals is concerned, at the lowest level which has been noted thus far this year.

With the close of the first six months of business in 1923, the chemical industry can look back on a January, February and March of active business and rising prices, followed by an April, May, June of declining prices and readily reduced buying.

The second three months just about offset the gains of the first three months, and the industry finds itself at about the same place where it was at the beginning of the year. All in all, however, a very fair volume of chemicals was moved into consumption during the period.

This week saw a further drop in phenol prices. Prussiates are lower. Amidopyrine is down. Some of the rare alkaloids are higher. Menthol is still very high and uncertain as to the future. Except for the benzol going into motor fuel, little is being purchased. Vegetable and animal oils are weak, while fish oils continue strong and scarce.

CARRIERS ARE SOLD LOWER IN BOSTON

Carriers were off in trading today on the Boston Stock Exchange. As in New York, New Haven was at a fresh bottom, changing hands at 11⅝, off 1⅞. Boston & Maine yielded 1¼ at 13 and Boston & Maine Class B dropping 2 points at 30.

In other directions the market showed a decidedly improved tone. Island Creek Coal was up a point at 99, and Hardy Coal at 29½ and Mergenthaler at 151 made like gains.

Anaconda stiffened 1⅛ at 40 and U. S. Smelting 1¼ at 23.

Fractionally higher were Swift & Co., American Telephone, American Woolen preferred, Eastern Manufacturing, Mayflower, North Butte, Gray & Davis and Pacific Mills.

New England Telephone, J. T. Connor Stores, Copper Range, United Fruit and Ventura Oil all yielded a shade.

Most lively on the Boston Curb were Boston & Montana Corporation, unchanged at 12; Crystal, up 2 at 87; Nixon Nevada, up 1 at 7; Paymaster, off 1 at 25, and Verde Mines, unchanged at 33.

Boston Notes

THORNDIKE Company, Palmer Mill of Otis Company Three Rivers, and Boston Duck Company, Bondsville, have closed for ten days.

MEDFORD will receive proposals until July 6 for discount of a temporary revenue loan of $200,000.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., will receive bids until July 10, for purchase of $105,000 of 4½ per cent coupon paving and improvement bonds.

COUNTY of orfolk will receive pro-posals until July 10, for purchase of $39,000 4½ per cent. coupon "agricultural school" notes.

ATCHISON'S stockholders in states traversed are steadily increasing. In 1910 there were 1792 in these states, while in 1922 the number had grown to 7831.

NORTH Butte's present production costs are close to 15 cents a pound on monthly output of around 1,250,000 pounds of copper. On 15 to 15¼ cent metal, company can just about break even.

WORKING out of some of recent disabilities, New Haven is now coping to better advantage with heavy traffic, and net earnings are expected to show improvement.

U. S. SMELTING'S Mexican output has averaged $7,100 tons during same period last year.

SINCE beginning of year Sunnyside Mines in Colorado, and Gold Road Mine in Arizona have resumed and preparations are being made to resume at Mammoth mine and smelter.

CAPACITY of Utah's Magna plant is being increased. This, with Arthur plant will provide milling capacity of 40,000 tons of ore daily, largest operation of porphyry deposit in world.

CONTINUATION of contract price of $75 a ton for news-print by International Paper for last half of 1923, despite higher labor and raw material costs, will not appreciably affect 1923 earnings.

SENECA officials estimate that out-put of 15,000,000 pounds can be made in 1924, with gradual increase to 30,000,000 pounds annually at cost estimated at not over 10½ cents.

SALT CREEK OIL DECLARES EXTRA

Directors of the Salt Creek Producers' Association have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 20 cents and an extra dividend of 20 cents, both payable August 1 to stock of record, July 16.

STERLING OFF TO NEW LOW FOR YEAR

Demand sterling fell today to another 1923 low at $4.56, off 16 cents from the 1923 high. February 21 sterling reached $4.72¼, the highest quotation since March, 1919, when the English government allowed the pound to take its natural course, having removed the stabilizing support given it during the war when British purchases here were heavy.

February 4, 1920, sterling was quoted at $3.18, the record low.

At that time it was freely predicted the pound would break under $3. The advance from the law was slow and painful, with many reverses until the Summer of 1921, when foreign exchange quotations discounted the Limitation of Armaments Conference held in Washington during December, 1921. Economic recovery of Great Britain has been the chief factor in the appreciation.

The high for sterling last year was $4.70 about the middle of December; the low was $4.17 in January. The 1921 high was $4.00½ in November, and the low was $3.53½ in January. When sterling touched the 1923 high in February it was discounting the negotiations for the funding of the British debt to the United States. At the same time it was believed difficulties in the Ruhr district would be speedily settled.

Swiss francs and Swedish kronen were also at new lows today. Latest foreign exchange quotations were: Sterling, $4.56; francs, $.0591*; lire, $.0434; Belgian francs, $.0502; marks, 173,910 to dollar; Czecho-Slovak kroner, $.0298½; Swiss francs, $.1744; guilders, $.3905; pesetas, $.1419; Swedish kronen, $.2641; Norway, $.1623; Denmark, $.1743.

BABSON'S ADVICE IS TO SELL

Roger W. Babson says: "We feel that clients are wise in liquidating their stock holdings as fast as the opportunity offers. Of course it is unwise to sell on panicky days, but on days when the market is steady and even a little strong one should liquidate securities. The difficulty is that on these days the news is always bullish and it is very hard to sell. Success, however, comes from doing the hard things rather than the easy things. Clients should liquidate holdings as fast as the opportunity presents itself. The market is a sale on days when good news is spread about and people are temporarily feeling better.

"Stocks, commodities and labor have been boosted too high and the inevitable reaction is taking place.

"It must be recognized that the tide has changed and that purchasing, manufacturing, selling and investing policies should change to correspond. Methods and policies which were justified two months ago are no longer justified today."

THE GLORIOUS 4TH

In a few days we will celebrate the glorious Fourth of July. Young America will have to be a little more quiet than their parents were, for the safe and sane Fourth idea has done away with much of the old-time racket and danger, for which we can all give thanks. It makes no difference to the household pests, such as the bed bugs, fleas, cockroaches, rats, mice, etc., whether it is the 4th or 5th—business all the time is their motto. You can figure that the 4th will be no exception, and if they get anywhere near you they will proceed to get busy at once.

If you are planning to go away for the Summer and don't know much about the quarters you are going to have, it might be a good idea to stock up with Martin's Powders for household pests. These powders are very effective and make short work of the pests. You then have a measure of protection against household pests if you should meet them.

There are eleven different powders, one for each pest. They can be procured at drug or department stores in New England for 60c and $1.20 per can, or by mail for 65c and $1.30. Postage rates vary according to zones. Send money order, check or cash with mail orders, also specify the particular powder desired. Registered in Maine.

Renewing Declaration of Our Independence

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with others, and to assume among the Powers of the earth the separate station to which THAT PEOPLE'S IDEALS AND THE WELFARE OF THE WORLD entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

To such a pass has it come that not only the self-seeking European nations, but the sentimentalism and the snobbishness of our own nationals make it necessary for America to declare anew the reasons for defending our independence untrammeled and secure from the relations and alliances into which these sinister influences would lure and entangle us.

If ever, then certainly tomorrow, on this Day of Days in American history, it is desirable to hark back to the fundamental principles and to the holy traditions that have made and preserved us as a nation.

On this one hundred forty-seventh Independence Day we shall not apologize to those well-meaning but misguided Americans who sneer at our loyalty to the inspired statesmanship of Washington and Jefferson and the whole long line of Presidents (including even Wilson himself, until Wilson was bitten by the mad dream of world-presidency, and of Harding, until campaigning for a second term made him waver)—all of whom consistently maintained the traditional policy of American aversion from permanent alliance with other Powers.

In any case, it is not a question of accepting ancient guidance, but of maintaining a position which, while it is in harmony with honored traditions, represents our present-day ideals as a nation and our best and only means of promoting the welfare of the world.

Quite as truly as it became inevitable for the American Colonists to dissolve the political bands which had connected them with Britain, our present sense of America's meaning as a nation makes it necessary for us now to dissolve the political bands which, for a period, had connected the United States with the Allied Powers.

This is no time to waste analysis upon the avowed purposes and the obvious futility of the Great War. Suffice it to say that, construing those purposes according to our finest statement of them in the days of the war, the United States did her share toward the triumph of those purposes. If dethronement of kings means democratic progress, we surely have helped to make the world a little safer for democracy.

But, beyond that, it would be treason to American principles—the sin against the Holy Ghost of this Nation—for this country to play a part in any organization designed to make permanent the unjust territorial rearrangements resulting from that war. It is this consideration alone that prompted Americans in 1920, regardless of party, to vote so overwhelmingly against our joining the League of Nations.

The same consideration will prevent the people's endorsement of President Harding's advocacy of the League's Court. Namely, because both League and Court are seen to be the creation of the victor nations to down and to keep down the conquered nations.

America cannot consistently take part in such a game, even though the sinister object is masked in pious professions of promoting and preserving the peace of the world.

In using the Fourth of July as the occasion for reaffirming American loyalty to American principles and American traditions, the Hearst newspapers feel that they speak with the voice of the American people of 1923, expressing this people's ideals and its devotion to the actual welfare of a world moving toward freedom.

Disabled Soldiers Problem

Work of the Business Man Now Begins to Find Them Suitable Employment

One of the great aftermaths of the war was the problem of making good to our disabled soldiers.

The government undertook to rebuild them and make them fit for the avocations of peace. That work has been carried on for four years. The veterans have been given medical treatment; they have been put in schools for training in the things they can do; and they have been given allowances to support themselves and those dependent upon them during the period of their training.

The problem is to find occupations for them for which they have been qualified by their new training. Now the work of the business man begins. His is the problem of finding for these veterans suitable employment.

The veterans are willing and ready for work in body and in spirit. They are prepared to give at least one dollar's worth of value for a dollar of pay plus a reasonable profit to the employer.

This month, the local Veterans' Bureau declares 125 men are ready to work, most of them bookkeepers, accountants and salesmen.

The appropriate departments of the Boston Chamber of Commerce are working hard to place these veterans in positions for which they are qualified.

A representative of the Chamber engaged in this splendid work says: "Massachusetts' war record is one of leadership and unflinching patriotism. The deeds of her sons are numerous and valorous. But what greater accomplishment could be credited to this State than to say that the business men of Massachusetts have not failed in their obligations occasioned by the World War, but have placed her rehabilitated veterans promptly and well?"

The Chamber can do little alone. It needs the co-operation of all its members and all the business men of the community.

Will you, if you are a business man reading this editorial, consider the veterans when you have an opportunity?

Jail Sentences

We agree with Judge Webster Thayer of the Superior Court, who says that he thinks jail sentences are about in order for reckless driving of automobiles.

Judge Thayer calls attention to the good effect of the imposition of jail sentences for this sort of misconduct in New Jersey.

Thereupon, Judge Thayer sentenced James Hayes, who recklessly drove a car that went down an embankment last winter and killed two passengers, to one year in jail.

Good for Judge Thayer! To jail with the bootleggers also!

WILL PROBE MYSTERIES OF PACIFIC

LONDON, July 3.—In a little room on the sixth floor of a suite of offices in the West End the finishing touches are being put to a scheme which, in its origin, recalls the days of Elizabeth and the romance of the voyagers of discovery of Drake, Hawke and Frobisher.

A scientific expedition is being fitted out to explore the mysteries of the Pacific. Famous scientists will sail the Southern Seas to gather some of the wealth of material which awaits research among the sun-baked islands of the East.

One of the promoters of the scheme is a great-grandnephew of Captain Cook.

Return Checks

Editor Boston American:

I would like to know by what authority the Boston Elevated limits return tickets on five-cent rides, to one month. It seems to me that a person paying a dime for a ride and then receiving the return check, where the fare is only a nickel, should be allowed to use this return check at any time.

For instance, a person getting on the car at Newton Corner, bound for some place in Brighton or Allston, drops a dime in the box and gets a return check. Now, if that person does not use that ticket within a month, he is out of luck and the company gets a dime for a five-cent ride.

Police and Strikers

Editor Boston American:

While some Boston police officers are under fire for their attitude toward striking operators, I think it is only fair to give credit to other officers who maintain impartial conduct.

I speak particularly of sergeants and patrolman who are on duty at the Back Bay exchange. Sergeants Waugh and Morrissey of Station 16 were in charge of the police detail and I watched them on many occasions. Not once did I see anything hostile in their behavior. Many times they might have acted in a drastic manner. But a few words from either sergeant usually straightened out impending trouble.

Deserted by Husband

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a young woman, twenty-three years old, with two children, a boy five and a girl four. My husband deserted me, and I am obliged to work in a factory and make hardly enough to keep my children together. We all need clothing very much. I take size 3 in shoes and 16 years in clothes. I am also handy in sewing and can make over anything.

MRS. H. M. G.

Dresses for Girl

Editor Helping Hand:

I have clothes for a girl about twelve years old. Also old magazines.

C. A. S.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of Mrs. M. M. G., who has a girl that age in need of clothes. Your offer of magazines will be held for replies.

Letters for Mrs. M. G. C.

Editor Helping Hand:

The postman has returned three letters addressed to Mrs. M. G. C., Lowell, Mass., because no mail box was provided at the address given. If Mrs. M. G. C. will let us know where to send these letters we will forward them.

Soldier's Widow in Need

Editor Helping Hand:

Please may I ask if someone could help me? I have no husband. He was a World War veteran and is dead. I have a little baby five months old, and I live with my mother, who is almost blind. My mother needs clothes, very much—size 40. I wear size 36, and the poor baby has nothing at all. I can't work, because I have to stay with baby because mother can't see.

MRS. W. L.

For a Little Girl

Editor Helping Hand:

Will you please send the address of the little girl signing herself C. H. to me at the above address? I have some things which she will be able to use. Owing to sickness we have delayed writing.

A. R.

C. H. has received so many offers that we think the things you have to give will do better somewhere else. If you will let us know what you have we will send you the name of someone else in need. We have forwarded you C. H.'s address, however, in case you are still interested. Thank you.

Dresses to Make

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a lot of dresses that can be made over for Mrs. A. C.'s children. If you will send me her address. I also have a girl's Winter coat, size 36. Have some women's hats and stockings to be made into rugs for someone who can use them.

MRS. H. J.

You have been sent the address of Mrs. A. C. The coat, hats and stockings for rugs will be held for replies. Many thanks.

Nothing to Wear

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a mother of two small children, one 2½ years and the other four months old. My husband is a war veteran, serving in the YD outfit. He has not worked since last Winter, as times were dull and he could not get work. I have nothing to wear hardly, and neither has he. I had a few things given to the baby when he was born, and only for that I do not know what I would have done. I am twenty-one years old, and wear size 38. My husband is twenty-five and wears size 9 shoes.

MRS. C. E. C.

Needs a Home

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a young woman twenty-five years old, with a little girl one year old. My husband has been unemployed for about a year, and we are breaking up our home, as it is impossible to keep it up much longer. I am writing to you in the hope that you may be able to find a home for baby and myself. I will work for very little wages in order to keep baby with me. I can do plain cooking and all kinds of housework. It is essential that I get work, as lately I have been barely able to keep the baby in enough to eat.

MRS. C. F. H.

Help for Invalid

Editor Helping Hand:

Please send me the name of the son of Mrs. R. G., who is in Rutland Sanitarium, and I will be glad to send slippers and do what I can to help.

T. F. O'B.

Editor Helping Hand:

Kindly send me the address of Mrs. R. G., whose son is in the Rutland Sanitarium. I have a nice bathrobe that will fit him and will buy him a pair of bathroom slippers.

MRS. W. S. H.

Our sincere thanks to both T. F. O'B. (who is a dealer in men's slippers) and Mrs. W. S. H. The name of Mrs. R. G.'s son has been sent to each. As will be seen, it will be unnecessary to take advantage of Mrs. W. S. H.'s kind offer to buy him a pair.

Services as Nurse

Editor Helping Hand:

In reading the Boston American I saw that Mrs. A. A. K. would like a home for a while until her baby is born. Now I received help from your column, and I would like to return the favor. We could give Mrs. A. A. K. a home, and, as I have had some experience as a practical nurse, I could care for her at confinement if you or some of the kind readers could find some way of paying the doctor's fee. It would be company for me. My trials are over with, and I should be glad to have her. She won't have to feel under any obligations to me or my husband whatever.

MRS. G. H. F.

I think the doctor can be arranged for comparatively easily if Mrs. A. A. K. can find a home, and, thanks to your very generous hospitality, that seems to have been arranged very nicely. Thank you very much. Your address has been sent to Mrs. A. A. K.

BELLONA WITH TORCH AND SCOURGE ROVES EUROPE

By Herbert Kaufman

BESIDES Mars, heathen Rome worshipped Bellona, the Goddess of Discord. Ancient sculpture represented the lady with a torch in one hand and a scourge in the other. Cables indicate that Olympian sabotage is again mischief-making.

Brussels moved in reprisal against Druisburg, where a guerilla band has just bombed a railroad bridge, killing a number of Belgian soldiers and civilians on a passing train.

Cuno, warned that there can be no pour-parlers in the Ruhr until he enforces submission to allied authority, defiantly answers the entente with fresh instructions for the maintenance of passive resistance through occupied regions.

Lloyd George encourages German obduracy with another article attacking French good faith.

Nothing can convince the Welshman that Poincare, utterly disregarding the Versailles treaty, is not secretly bent on the establishment of a buffer strip along the Rhine.

Will-o'-the Wisps and War Ghosts

Briton and Gaul shake editorial fists across the channel as their respective governments throw economy to the winds and enter an ominous race for control of the air.

Paris not only refuses to limit plane construction but rebuffs, as well, England's suggestion for restriction of submarine strength. No wonder Governor Clarkson, former head of the Council of National Defense, joins with William Randolph Hearst in a fervent plea for American preparedness.

The rights and property of rich and unarmed nations aren't likely to be respected when great powers next engage in a death grapple.

While Mr. Harding, blind to prima facie facts, chases his World Court will-o'-the-wisp, overseas strategists, behind their league smoke screens, study maps and turn national treasuries into war chests.

A Dream That May Become a Nightmare

Russia, rapidly recovering self-control, with the best organized secret service on earth, and troops drilling everywhere, awaits the inevitable hour when her growing armies and air fleets, not to mention refilled granaries, may determine the balance of continental power.

Trotzky gives us up for a bad job. He accuses America of plotting the Old World ruin and readiness to prey upon its impoverished and exhausted countries.

Moscow acknowledges the hopelessness of immediate revolution in the United States. We are still too prosperous and content with present systems fo Soviet provocateurs.

Tax-burdened, bewildered Europe offers far more encouragement to the all-pervading ambitions of Bolshevism. The former central empires are riper fruit for plucking. Their destinies shall be soon controlled.

Then, with a neutral or associated Japan, the easily intimidated Balkans, and vengeful, loot hungry Turkey under common banners, France, Italy and Belgium may be promptly dealt with.

After that, the Anglo-Saxons!

Call it a wild dream, if you please, yet beware lest it become a nightmare.

Nine out of ten readers will put down such talk as assinine, but remember that the braying of asses and the honking of geese have more than once saved kingdoms.

"Suffer Little Children"

The old woman who lived in a shoe turns up at Schenectady in an automobile.

Mrs. Anna Siewers, a hatless, calico-clad "baby-farmer," is discovered with fourteen half-dressed motherless infants, five of her own youngsters, and a dog—all packed in a single taxicab.

One of her piteous charges died on the chill night ride from Manhattan, and hospital authorities despair of saving the life of another.

Nothing can be done about it. Our enlightened laws "suffer little children to come unto" any avaricious brute to whose care inhumanity may entrust them.

The Tarpian Rock was a far more merciful institution than the pestilential pens where countless unwanted waifs starve and perish.

A Methodist minister, writing from Luzerne, pictures even worse conditions throughout the Ruhr. Rickets, scrofula and tuberculosis have swept the district. Milk is practically unprocurable. Heaven alone knows the real casualties of a modren war. Diplomacy evidently doesn't care to learn.

Malnutrition also continues to take toll from Austria. Goitre is omnipresent. Doctors find it necessary to combine daily salt with iodine and enforce its general use. Otherwise an entire generation will be afflicted.

The band that lifts the sword smites far beyond the battle line.

"They Also Served"

Schumann-Heink bares her heart to the convention of Disabled American Veterans, and sobs for the son who died on submarine service for the Fatherland, while his four brothers followed conscience and the Stars and Stripes.

She believed he was right. "As his mother, I do not apologize for him."

Then, blinded with tears, she runs from the hall as her audience rises to a man and in knightly spirit toasts the memory of a foe.

Admiral Sims, with equal gallantry, defends the record of U-Boat Commander Rose.

He supports the contention of British officers that they never fired upon or deserted crews of torpedoed vessels, but fulfilled on every possible occasion, the proudest naval traditions.

Appreciation of enemy prowess and valor is as old as the ages. Hark to the dying words of Tamerlane, the Mongol conqueror:

"Soldiers, whether associates or adversaries, I held in esteem, and the man who drew his sword and committed hostilities against me and preserved his fidelity to his master, him I greatly honored. When such a man came unto me, showing his worth, I respected his fidelity and valued his attachment."
